$450,229 in Research Grants Awarded to YSN

The academic year began in great style with the September 22 announcement of the United States Public Health Service award of $470,229 in research grants to the Yale University School of Nursing. For those whose local paper did not cover the complete story, we quote from the University News Bureau press release.

These grants have a significance far beyond their record amount, according to Dean Florence Schorske Wald of the Yale School of Nursing. They reflect the pioneer role of the School as a graduate center, with a responsibility to carry out research for the improvement of nursing care of patients.

The grants have been awarded through the Division of Nursing, Bureau of State Services of the USPHS. The funds will support seven different projects - three that have just been initiated and four that have been in progress for some time and will be continued with the federal grants.

Dean Wald explained that graduate schools of nursing have concentrated on teaching nursing rather than studying nursing practice systematically. The small amount of research which has been done was devoted almost entirely to studying nurses rather than nursing and studying curricular problems. It has only been in the past few years that qualified nursing schools, such as the Yale School, have undertaken major research programs aimed at improving patient care and helping patients to make better use of health measures, medical and otherwise.

The Dean pointed out that with the support of the $470,229 in federal grants, the program of the Yale School is now about equally divided between teaching and research. She said that this pioneer work in research is enriched because of the close working relationship of the Yale nursing faculty with other University units, notably the Yale School of Medicine and its Department of Epidemiology and Public Health, and the Yale Departments of Psychology, Sociology and Philosophy.

The seven research projects supported by the federal funds.

1. A grant of $56,666 for the research of Mrs. Rhetaugh Dumas, assistant Professor of Nursing, to test the effect of several specific approaches by the nurse to prepare patients psychologically for hospitalization and surgery. She believes it important to determine how patients perceive their hospital and surgical experiences and is interested to learn how nursing care relieves stress caused by psychological factors.

2. Through a grant of $26,513, Anna Baziak, Research Associate in Nursing and Psychiatry, has continued to examine the attitudes of nurses in a psychiatry hospital, how the attitudes affect patients, and how the attitudes may be changed to help patient care.

3. With a grant of $42,311, Virginia Henderson, Research Associate, is completing a collection, categorizing and indexing of studies in nursing from 1900 down to present. The index she has prepared and designed is to provide a model for future indexes of nursing studies.

4. Supported by a grant of $38,013, Lucy H. Conant, Research Associate, will examine the interaction of public health nurses and mothers attending child health conferences and test techniques to maximize the nurse-patient relationship.

5. A grant of $61,312 for Donna K. Diers, Instructor in Psychiatric Nursing, to develop systematic methods of studying the verbal relationship of patient and nurse.

6. A grant of $134,019 for Howard Leventhal, Associate Professor of Psychology and Research Associate in the School of Nursing, to support new research about reactions and adjustment of women during labor and to determine how nurses can assist patients in labor.

7. Finally, $111,595 has been granted for a project under Dean Wald which makes it possible for nursing school faculty members to undertake research work, develop new knowledge and techniques and collaborate with Yale faculty from other schools and departments in conduct of research.

Dear Fellow Alumna,

I feel remiss not to have sent a progress report long before this, but we have been so busy making progress that we have had no time to report it! At least the time is right to wish you all a happy and prosperous 1966.

The dinner for Ernestine Wiedenbach will be an occasion to have a warm get-together. We are planning it for the evening of Alumnae Day, Friday, February 19, and soon you will receive an invitation in the mail. We hope that many of you will be able to accept this invitation.

The year 1965 has seen some interesting developments, most of them good, some sad. On September 1 the Yale School of Nursing received $201,321 in research awards, which has made it possible for us to continue Rhetaugh Dumas' study on Experiments in Clinical Practice, and to add three new studies: Lucy Conant's Exploratory Study in Nurse-Patient Give and Take; Donna Diers' Studies in Nurse-Patient Interaction; and Howard Leventhal's Measurement of Emotion and its Alteration by Nursing.

At about the same time, several new faculty members came into the fold. Rachel Robinson was appointed Assistant Professor of Psychiatric Nursing, and also Director of Nursing of the new Connecticut Mental Health Center. Mrs. Robinson is a graduate of University of California and New York University, and has had recent interesting experience at the Albert Einstein Medical Center. Despite family responsibilities and a long commute from Stamford where she lives with her husband, Jackie Robinson, and their three children, she became an important and well-loved member of the faculty.

Nancy French has been appointed instructor in psychiatric nursing. She comes to Yale via Western Reserve and Boston University, and was most recently at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center. She lives with her husband, Bruce, and two small children in Derby.

When you come in February we hope you can not only meet these two faculty but also Mr. James Dabbs, instructor in psychology; Margaret Maher, instructor in maternal and newborn health nursing; and Elizabeth Sager Sharp, who will join the faculty February 1 to take up the reins for Ernestine Wiedenbach as clinical expert in maternal and newborn health nursing. Our research faculty has been augmented by four persons in this last year: Ann Ports Hempy, Jean Irwin Johnson, Amelia Munson, and Charlotte Cram who has just been married and is now Charlotte Cram Elsberry.

We have fourteen new students, twelve from the United States and two from Canada. The faculty have been much engaged in long range planning for the School of Nursing, and we have divided ourselves in two three task groups: Long Range Planning for Clinical Practice, Long Range Planning for Advanced Study, and Long Range Planning for Relationships between the School of Nursing, School of Medicine, Graduate School, and the Yale-New Haven Medical Center. When you come on the 19th of February I hope to have an opportunity to tell you the details of some of our thinking at the morning coffee hour.

Our saddest loss has been the death of Esther Parsons, who died in Seattle, Washington on September 10th. While we all feel her loss keenly, every one concurs that to die at the end of a happy reunion with her nieces and nephews in Seattle and without suffering a long, lingering illness was best.

Our hearts are all with you and we look forward to hearing your news, directly or indirectly, so that we can keep in touch with our "family."

With warmest regards,
Sincerely yours,

(Mrs.) Florence S. Wald, Dean

In Memoriam

Miss Esther Parsons died in Seattle, Washington on September 10, 1965 while visiting her niece. Miss Parsons came to Yale in 1947 and, until her retirement in June 1958, served the school as Residence Director of Sterling Dormitory. Previously she had lived and worked at Marietta College, Marietta, Ohio, where her father was College President. She was a selfless person and gave to students, family, friends and co-workers, the support of enduring and endearing kindness, loyal friendship and understanding. She made Sterling Dormitory a warm and gracious place in which to live and work.

A slight, meticulous person, deceptively fragile looking, children were drawn to her wherever she went. She had a sense of beauty and helped to create it in the rooms in Sterling, making it a home away from home.

"A lady of quality" as described by a friend, strong in her integrity and Brahmin like sense of values and duty, she continued to work for several years after retirement as a capable Executive Secretary for the Yale University School of Nursing Alumnae Association.

We will continue to miss her. For her "the long night is ended and the way lies open to eternal day". She "has lifted her eyes unto the hills when cometh her strength". The hills were, as always the place she loved - Jaffrey and home.

Report of 1965 Alumnae College and June Reunion

The Alumnae College program, held on Friday, June 11, 1965 featured papers by Dean Wald on "Emerging Nurse Practice", Mary Fischelis ('57, MSN '61) "The Role of the Psychiatric Nurse in an Out-Patient Clinic", and Ernestine Wiedenbach "Why Nurse-Midwifery at YSN?" The presentation of the papers was followed by discussion from a reactive panel which included Mary Joanna Foster, '47, Assistant Director of Nursing at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, Miss Nea Norton, Assistant Professor, Psychiatry (Psychiatric Social Work) Yale University, Dr. George Silver, Chief, Divisions of Social Medicine, Montefiore Hospital, New York and Mr. John Thompson, Associate Professor, Hospital Administration, Yale University Department of Epidemiology and Public Health, School of Medicine.

Saturday, June 12th, the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association was held in the morning. Following this, many returning alumnae visited the Medical School Library where the Effie J. Taylor Exhibit was on display in the cases in the Rotunda and Alcove. Credit for the selection, arrangement and documentation of this exhibit goes to Miss Myrtie Carpenter.

The following description is quoted from the Bulletin of the Yale Medical Library, Volume XXIII, Number 10, June 1965.

Exhibition: Effie J. Taylor

Special recognition is being accorded Effie Jane Taylor, Dean Emeritus of the Yale University School of Nursing, who has now reached her 91st year. The displays in both the rotunda and the alcove feature letters, pictures, medals, degrees and citations representative of honors which have come to her during her long years of contribution to the nursing profession.

Case I contains items relative to the period at Johns Hopkins Hospital from which she graduated in 1907. Miss Taylor is pictured as director of the nursing department of the Henry Phipps Psychiatric Clinic, director of the Army School of Nursing at Camp Meade, and associate principal of the Johns Hopkins Hospital School of Nursing.

Two of the cases in the alcove relate to the Yale period, when Miss Taylor was for several years, superintendent of nurses in the New Haven Hospital and director of the last class in the Connecticut Training School, before becoming Dean of the Yale University School of Nursing. A New York Sun news release of December 3, 1926 contains the announcement of Miss Taylor's appointment as professor of psychiatric nursing. Dean Annie W. Goodrich in describing the appointment stated: "Professor Taylor's appointment is of widespread interest and importance, for she will hold the first and probably the only professorship in the world in psychiatric nursing".

Another case presents aspects of her responsibilities during World War II, including the Student Nurse Cadet Corps and the securing of personnel for the 39th General Hospital, sometimes known as the Yale Unit. A final case contains miscellaneous material, including two recent publications: Nursing Studies Index and Nursing Research, A Survey and Assessment, gifts to Miss Taylor, as well as a bound presentation from the Postmaster General of the first stamps issued by the Government honoring the nursing profession. Interspersed in various cases are a few of Miss Taylor's published articles."

Miss Taylor was the guest of honor at the Alumnae Luncheon held in the Yale Commons. Members of re-union classes of '30, '35, '40, '45 and '45W, '50, '55, and '60 gave brief reports and greetings. Mary Taylor Swoboda, '26 spoke of the days when YSN had Misses Goodrich and Taylor in the top echelon and Misses Goodrich and Taylor in the student body, and recalled some of the amusing and amazing incidents that occurred as a result of this situation. Jean MacLean, '35, paid a warm tribute to Miss Taylor. Margaret Hulburt, '40 probably deserved a tribute herself, for in the midst of her comments, Mildred Briggs Twiss, '35 appeared in her old Yale basic uniform (long-sleeved variety) and proceeded to read a poem about the days in such attire, to the delight of all present. Nelliana Best, '40, concluded the alumnae greetings to Miss Taylor with a tribute based upon the letters of her name.

When formal festivities for the day were concluded, the group wandered through the quadrangle behind Woolsey Hall, pausing in the sunshine and reflection of the Beinecke Rare Book Library for pictures and conversations prior to the individual class events that were planned.

Yale-New Haven Hospital - Yale-New Haven Medical Center

In June of 1965 Grace-New Haven Community Hospital officially changed its name to Yale-New Haven Hospital. The change resulted from a revised affiliation between the Hospital and the Yale University School of Medicine. The Hospital and the Medical School will continue to be operated by their respective corporations, but under the new affiliation agreement the University will nominate to the Board of the Hospital a group consisting of 6-8 of the 24 directors, all of whom are leading community citizens and Yale representatives.

This hospital, one of the nation's oldest medical institutions traces its beginning to May 28, 1826 when the General Hospital Society of Connecticut was officially chartered. The first hospital in the State of Connecticut, (and the fifth oldest in the United States) was started by five doctors on the Yale faculty.

Opening in 1833 with 75 beds, the hospital has never closed its doors. During the civil war, the hospital and grounds were used by the government for a military hospital. Major reconstruction and expansion took place in the 1930's when the Tompkins and Fitkin wings were built. In 1945, the original New Haven Hospital and the former Grace Hospital consolidated its facilities and staff to form the Grace-New Haven Community Hospital. The Memorial Unit, financed mostly by public subscription was opened in 1953.

In the past ten years the Hospital and Medical Center facilities have continued to grow and be refurbished. The Hospital today has 735 beds and 94 basins. The Dana Clinic Building was recently opened to ease the pressures experienced by out-patient services.

New additions to the Medical Center include the Laboratory of Epidemiology and Public Health building which houses the C-E. A. Winslow Auditorium. The Connecticut Mental Health Center is now under construction on Park Street, close to the former site of Nathan Smith Hall.

25th Reunion Gift

Marge Frick Allen, '40's class secretary reports that a photograph of Miss Jean Barrett will be presented to the Yale University School of Nursing by the class as its 25th reunion gift. Jean Barrett, who missed reunion in June while acting as a WHO consultant in Egypt and Iran received a cable from her first YSN students.

Federation of Yale Alumni Organizations

Following two years of preliminary work, the Federation of Yale Alumni Organizations was announced on Monday, September 27, 1965. The purpose of this organization is to develop closer ties between the Alumni of Yale College and the Alumni of the graduate and professional schools.

Each organization remains autonomous, but the Federation as a group will sponsor the National Alumni Meeting held in Pittsburgh on January 21-22. President Brewster has appointed the following steering committee:

Mr. Arthur Greenfield, 1947,
Secretary of the Federation of
Yale Alumni Organization
Dr. Leona Baumgartner, Ph. D.
1932, M. D. 1934, President of the Yale Alumni in Public Health
Judge Herbert S. MacDonald, B. A.
1929, President of the Yale
Association of Class Officers
William Rockefeller, B. A. 1940,
Chairman of the Yale Alumni
Board
Miss Katherine B. Woodman, M. A.
1949, M. F. A. 1960, President of Yale Drama Association
Dr. Lawrence K. Pickett, B. A.
1941, M. D. 1944, President of the Association of Yale Alumni in Medicine.

The Federation plans to publish a directory of those concerned with all University alumni/ae activities.

The Yale Alumni Magazine is available through the YSN Alumnae Association at a group subscription rate of $2.50. Any interested, should send their checks, made out to Yale University, to the YSN Alumnae Association office, 310 Cedar Street, New Haven, Conn., 06511.
