"AFTER."

The dance is ended, the music is still,
And the merry laughter is o'er;
The moonlight is gilding the wood and the hill;
It was never so bewitching before.

Over the young and the happy who sleep,
The dream-god is weaving his spell,
While, waking, I gaze in the starry deep,
And hear what the night breezes tell.

The story they breathe is old I well know,
Yet new each time it is told,
Of a meeting, a waltz, of whisperings low,
Of moments more precious than gold.

Of a homeward walk 'neath the harvest moon,
A block or so out of the way,
Of farewells ended, alas! too soon,
By propriety's infamous sway.

'Tis such a night when the brownies love
To dance with the mischievous fays,
And they wove a spell around, above,
As they wheeled in an airy maze.

But the fairies stopped in their blithesome round,
The little ones stopped their play,
To see how sadly I turned to gaze,
How slowly I strolled away.

And so I'm alone building castles fair,
In the clouds that are floating above;
For the drowsy god I've never a care,
He flies at the bidding of love.

But he "takes it out" by many a pain
I abhor, an aching head;
If I see her off on the morning train
I'd better be off to bed.

THE COLLEGE REGATTA.

Upon the close of last term, the crew which had been selected to represent Yale proceeded to their quarters at Springfield, where they were to prepare for the contest on the 23rd of July. Williams was the only crew on the ground, but the others soon arrived, altogether making ten crews, including the Freshmen. The race was over a beautiful stretch of the Connecticut River, commencing two miles below the city and continuing down stream in an almost direct line for three miles. It was feared that the dry weather of July would lower the stage of the water and render a satisfactory race impossible, as it had done the year before at Ingleside, but these fears proved groundless. To one standing at the head of the course, the river presented a lively appearance as the ten crews rowed up and down on their regular practice. The Yale crew was quartered on the west bank of the river, opposite the city, at a pleasantly retired farm house. The citizens of Springfield had not erected boat-houses, as was anticipated, so that most of the crews were compelled to carry their boats quite a distance into barns and stables, or were forced to leave them in the open air.

As the day of the race drew near, each crew endeavored to catch the others' time and pick out the victor; it invariably failed in the first respect, and settled on itself as the winner. Arrangements had been made to start by a pistol shot, the stern of each boat to be held to the line until the shot was heard. This mode of starting was adopted in the Oxford-Harvard race, and was claimed necessary to secure a fair start, especially where so many boats were entered.

Tuesday, the 23d, opened clear and pleasant; but about nine o'clock a brisk wind set in from the south, sweeping the whole length of the course, which gradually increased until the whole course was white with caps. Notwithstanding the threatening aspect of the weather, the people began to take up available positions along the river early in the day, and all the afternoon the dark outlines of the road leading along the river bank could be traced for miles by the moving mass of people that filled it. All kinds of conveyances were brought into requisition, and a woman on top of an omnibus was not an unusual sight. The wind did not abate in the least, even at sundown, as was anticipated, so the people were doomed to return to the city and pass the night as best they could, for the race was postponed to the next morning. Comparatively few were on hand then, many having gone home disgusted, while others were kept away through fears of another postponement on account of the wind, which was still blowing briskly; but as it was with and not against the current, as on the day preceding, the river was not rough, and about 11 o'clock a pistol shot called the Freshmen into line.

A good start was soon given, but before they had proceeded ten lengths, Sheffield and Amherst came together, resulting in loss of time to each, whilst Mr. Upham, stroke, of Sheffield, received a blow in the side from an oar, so that he was unable to row the race with any vigor. From this on Wesleyan had it all her own way, coming in first, with Amherst, Brown and Sheffield behind in the order named.

The University crews were soon called for, but full twenty minutes were consumed before they got off. A false start was made by Harvard and Bowdoin getting off before the word, but they were at once recalled by Capt. Babcock, the starter. They finally started at 5 minutes before 12, with no boat having much advantage. To every one's surprise there was no foul at the start, and down shot the six boats almost abreast, the bronzed backs and arms of the men, wet with sweat, glistening like steel in the sun. The pace for a mile and a half was terrific, Harvard, Bowdoin and Amherst Intellectuals, as they were called to distinguish them from Amherst Agriculturals, having a slight lead, yet so close were they that none but a critical eye could have picked out the winner. From this point, however, the gaps began to widen, and soon came sounding the shouts from the lower end as Amherst crossed the line victorious, closely pursued by Harvard. The other crews followed, Bowdoin being 3d, Agricultural 4th, Williams 5th and Yale last. The race was one of the finest ever witnessed in this country, hotly contested to the last, and remarkable in that every crew was disappointed except the winners, and the result was a universal surprise to the public, who think that the strength of the crew is necessarily proportioned to the size of the college.

THAT FLAG AGAIN.

Now that '72 is known no more among us, and that the college is looking toward '76 for new ball men, again the question arises—How can base ball material be best developed?

In answer to this some one suggests: Have a second nine to practice with the University nine. Two objections to this plan may be given;—first, under the present arrangement, the Freshman nine playing with the University nine obtains better practice than it could in any other way. Second, this second nine would eventually take the place of class nines, and in so doing, injure the Freshman nine. Still the friends of this plan maintain that the University nine is entitled to the most consideration, and so for a small improvement in University practice they should adopt this plan, which certainly does away with class nines. But the most successful, though almost the only plan tried in the past, has been that of the champion class flag. Base Ball has been practiced at Yale but a few years, and though productive of a great deal of pleasure and local success, the University nine has never yet been victorious in the "great event." It cannot, then, be said that the champion flag has yet brought victory, but its beneficial effects can be seen in the history of '72. Previous to the institution of this flag, class nines usually dissolved at the end of Freshman year: not so after it. The class nine of '72 having beaten Stamford, Bridgeport, Brown and Harvard, on the institution of the champion flag, played for and won it in Sophomore year, held it against competition Junior year, and maintained their base ball activity until the time of graduation. When, however, last summer, by the rules of the flag, '74 became entitled to it, they were told that the flag was lost. As the flag has not yet made its appearance, and as no other has been provided by the parties having the old one in charge, it is necessary to drop the subject or in some way procure another. It becomes now a matter of college importance. Shall the honest rivalry of classes which tends to bring out the best University nine be cut short because the incentive to that rivalry is removed?

The following has been proposed for college consideration. At meetings of the several classes called early in the term, committees shall be appointed to collect funds sufficient to purchase a new flag; that the joint committee shall hold it until one class nine has beaten all her opponents, and that the rules printed in the College Courant, No. 18, of 1870 (the same as of the old), be adopted for the new. And may there not be greater rivalry for this the gift of college, than for the old, the bestowal of a single person.

THE COLLEGE LIBRARY.

Last week we alluded to the fact that the "Linonian and Brothers' Library," as it is to be called in the future, could not be used before the middle of the term. Until then the students will be obliged to use the college library. This, in addition to the fact that the college library is so much more used now than a few years ago, has caused the making of a new set of regulations, which is to be distributed to those who use the library.

As the old set was drawn up twenty-five years ago and has been copied from time to time without change, it contains many obsolete regulations, such as the one excluding Sophomores and Freshmen from the use of the library; or another, which provides that those who are admitted to its privileges shall pay for the use of books borrowed, twelve cents, for the term of two weeks or less time, for each folio or quarto volume, and six cents for each octavo or smaller volume.

The new regulations are of such interest to the great number of students who use the libraries, that only their length prevents our giving them in full. We note a few prominent points only. The new regulations apply to both the college and the Linonian and Brothers' libraries, and both alike will hereafter be open to all students in the various departments of the University without restriction, except that students in the Law, Medical and Scientific Departments are required to deposit with the librarian a bond to insure the good usage and return of borrowed volumes. This is not required from Theologues. The college library will be open for five hours of each week-day during term time. Four books are allowed to be drawn from each library by one person and to be kept for three weeks, with the privilege of renewal for a like period if the volume has not been called for in the meantime. The penalty for the "ordinary" detention of a book beyond the legitimate three weeks is five cents per day, and of course any damage done the books is to be made good. In severe cases the librarian may suspend the offender from the use of the library until his case has been acted upon by the library committee. The Linonian and Brother's library contains volumes of history, travels and English literature; the college library contains works on Language, Philosophy, Theology, Arts and Sciences. We refer those anxious to understand the card catalogue, the only one of the college library accessible to the public, to the explanation appended to the regulations.
Owing to severe and protracted indisposition, Mr. Elder has resigned his connection with The Record. His place will be filled by E. H. Lewis.

On our first page will be found an article on the race written by one who is justly considered an authority. Our next issue will contain an article by the same writer, giving his view as to the defeat of this year and some suggestions as to Yale’s best course in the race of ’73.

We confess we like the poetry which the Palladium’s night editor writes. There is a harmony in its versification which commends itself to us despite the questionable morbidness of some of it. It may be in order to congratulate the Courant on securing it for its columns. If so, we do so by all means, but as for The Record we still prefer it should represent, as far as it may, solely undergraduate ability.

We regret to inform the writer of “A Matter of Taste” that although his article is exceedingly apt, we think best not to publish it for two reasons. First, it has for its consideration the subject matter of an article already designed; secondly, we must insist, as is the custom of all journals of respectability, upon knowing at least who the writer is.

The first two copies of Mr. Chatfield’s newspaper are before us. They are full of high pretensions in a general way, and abound in low hits of an equally general character.

The strictures which the first number contained on the ’72 board of editors it is not our purpose to confute. The general opinion, as expressed in a city paper, is, that they were disgraceful, to say the least. How much disappointment they reflect in the writer, it becomes us not to surmise.

As far as our own position is concerned, we have no reason to explain any farther than we have done in our first issue. We promise the college, however, that its “unreflecting enthusiasm” shall, if we can possibly accomplish our aims, blossom forth ere summer into a settled self-complacency. There was one proposition so wretchedly mangled in its demonstration by the writer of the above article, that we cannot entirely pass it by.

We quote from the Courant.

“One of the chief requisites in an editorial corps is an entire harmony of conviction and interest, and this cannot be expected from this (The Record’s) board.”

Now, the reasons which are given to prove this are the very ones which, if they proved anything (which they do not), would prove the contrary to any one not unfamiliar with the ordinary rules of common sense.

But let us examine, if you please, a little farther into this question of “harmony.” Suppose, for the sake of argument and to speak allegorically, that the “chief cook,” “head-waiter,” and “boss-bottle washer” of the Ponce de Leon do harmonize their interests so far as to maltreat and abuse the same persons. We are yet assured personally by the proprietor that he was not (and we suppose will not be in future) responsible for the treatment which we received at their hands.

This may be “entire harmony of interest,” but we cannot rid ourselves of the impression that there may possibly be a better way of running a hotel than even the Ponce de Leon’s.
THE YALE RECORD.

To-Morrow, or as soon thereafter as we can obtain the official lists, we shall publish a supplement containing the names of the incoming class. Opposite the names of the Academic Freshmen who belong to Delta Kappa, so far as they could be ascertained, a "D" will be found. A "K" will denote membership in Kappa Sigma Epsilon, and a "G" connection with Gamma Nu. Copies of THE RECORD wrapped for mailing can be obtained at Hoadley's without extra charge.

In another column will be found a communication lamenting the loss of the champion class flag, which was for a long time held by '72, was placed in the custody of the captain of the nine, and was then lost. Evidently some one is to blame for carelessness or something worse, and if the culprit was only suitably punished in this case, a like occurrence would be prevented in the future.

But the mere loss of the flag is of small importance compared to its influence upon the interest taken in ball matters at Yale and upon our University nine. Judging from the noise its loss has occasioned, we judge it did greatly heighten the interest in ball matters here. This, of course, is very desirable, but whether the interest thus awakened was such as to benefit the University nine or not is a horse of quite another color. It seems to us that the tendency of the champion flag was to foster interest in the class nines to the prejudice of the University nine. The result is that Yale with the flag has won seven out of eight Freshman matches, and that Harvard, without anything we are aware of corresponding to the flag, has won every University match—a result which seems to indicate that Yale has had the best material and Harvard the best system of training. Of course this result is not wholly attributable to the interest which the flag created in class nines; but if even any portion of the result can be laid at its door, we should be extremely cautious about establishing another flag—especially if it is going to give as much trouble as has this one. The last captain of the University nine was opposed to the building up of strong class nines, and his opinion should carry considerable weight. His loss and that of his classmates who represented our college at Jarvis Field and Hamilton Park, together with the rumored absence of our first base and pitcher, makes the outlook for a victory next year very dark unless something is done. What can that something be? We have never yet heard of a trainer in connection with a ball nine, but why should not a nine as well as a six be coached by a professional? We know of no reason except that the idea would be called by many absurd. But is it absurd? Is it not merely new and strange? And is not our situation so desperate as to warrant us in following any plan which holds out even a remote prospect of victory? We hold that Yale's experience this year has proved two things. First, that amateur training is not equal to professional; and second, that the nine can never hope for success unless it undergoes a course of training at least as severe as that of the crew of former years. If these things are true, then let us have a professional trainer both for the nine and the crew, and then we may perhaps have other flags to talk about than the one whose loss now disturbs the peace of so many different persons.

'76 held its first class meeting last Saturday afternoon. It was largely attended, and so enthusiastic as to promise that the class will do much to revive ball and boating at Yale. Waite acted as Chairman and Johnston as Secretary of the meeting. The following are the officers of the B. B. C.: Sprague, Capt.; De Forest, Pres.; Hall, Treas.; Dawes, Sec.

In boating Metcalf will be Capt.; Weeks, 1st Lieut.; Howe, 2d Lieut.; Dawes, Purser.

The officers were chosen by acclamation and with a great deal of confusion. The East Hampton politicians fully redeemed their reputation.
IN MEMORIAM.

Died, Friday, Sept. 13, at Fall River,
BRADFORD M. C. DURFEE.

His memory at Yale will have an enduring monument in the building which bears his name.

Died, in Meriden, Friday, Sept. 13, 1872, ARTHUR CHAPMAN TIBBALS, of the Junior Class. Age 20 years 9 months and 15 days.

For the first time in our happy college course, we have been called to mourn the loss of a loved classmate.

Only ten weeks ago we bade him, enjoying health and strength, farewell. Day before yesterday we consigned to the grave all that remained of one who left us with such joyful expectations for the future.

His vacation had been a pleasant one, and a few days before the term commenced, he paid parting visits to his friends, busying himself making preparations for his return.

While sitting by an open window Sunday evening, in answer to some fear expressed by a friend that he would take cold, he said: "Oh! I am not afraid of it! I am always so strong and well, that I can endure any amount of air." Unhappily he had miscalculated his strength.

Late that evening he aroused his family by the sad story of his sickness, and though determined efforts were made to save him, they were unavailing, and he passed away from this life on Friday last, expressing the desire that his classmates would meet him on the other side.

He was reserved in his manner, and somewhat reticent in his intercourse with his classmates, but self-sacrificing and eager to do for others. No one ever heard a word of censure or criticism passed on any of his conduct. Although he is with us no more, he has left a character that we may study and emulate. His peaceful death was a fitting close to his pure and faithful life.

We may truly say that he possessed a symmetrical Christian character, which now silently allures us to the path which led him to his eternal rest.

The following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, God in his Providence has removed from us our classmate Arthur C. Tibbals:
Resolved, That while we mourn the loss of our classmate, we recognize the mercy of Him who till now has kept our circle unbroken.
Resolved, That we are grateful to the Giver of all good for our companion's faithful life and Christian death.
Resolved, That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy in their deep affliction.
Resolved, That this expression of our love and sympathy be forwarded to them, and that the customary badge of mourning be worn by the class for thirty days.
Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the college papers.

In behalf of the class, A. M. DODGE, FRANK JENKINS, H. A. KENNEDY, BERT VAN HORN, F. S. WITHEBE.

BETA OF PSI UPHISON, SEPT. 14, 1872.

In behalf of the society we wish to express the deep regret we feel at the death of our dear brother in Psi Upsilon, Arthur Tibbals. While cherishing an affectionate remembrance of his talents and virtues, we mourn the loss of one whose generous and self-sacrificing disposition endeared him to us all; he was a genial companion, a tried friend, a faithful and worthy brother. The chapter further resolved to shroud their badges for thirty days, and directed their action to be communicated to the other chapters of the Fraternity.

PERSONAL

'71. G. A. Strong and Thos. Thacher sojourn in our midst for a few weeks.
'72. F. U. Downing takes a post-graduate course at the S. S. S.
'72. E. S. Lines enters the Yale Theological Seminary this fall.
'72. J. W. Stimpson goes abroad in two or three weeks.
'72. E. H. Jenkins enters the S. S. S. this fall.
'72. H. W. Jameson teaches in St. Louis.
'72. F. W. Blake enters the Berkeley Divinity School this fall.
'72. Mr. Benedict, of the Amherst University crew of last summer, enters the Yale Theological Seminary this fall.
ON THE CAMPUS.

Teal, '74, still lives.
Fall Races, Oct. 16.
The Courant has a devil.
We console with the Little editor.
'74. E. S. Dwight enters the S. S.
Six Freshmen wait an empty hat-rack.
The Banner will be out about Oct. 1.
Look out for a Gamma New song book!
Twenty Juniors enter the Calculus division.
The new Chapel is about to be commenced.
'73. E. D. Rand seeks an abode at Harvard.
'74. G. F. Doughty will not return this year.
'73. G. V. Gould has entered Williams College.
Now steal old hymn books from new seats in Chapel.
And now the north entry of Farnam has an "organ."
Freshman Society Initiations came off last Saturday night.
'73. S. L. Beckley, formerly of '73, was in town last week.
The Yale Courant board has now absorbed C. B. Dudley, '71.
The Chapel has suffered a lowering as to the rails of its galleries.
The Medical school opens Oct. 17, one month later than usual.
Henceforth the Yale Courant will appear on Saturdays—as usual.
Frissell, '73, now warbles Hebrew melodies in the Jewish synagogue.
A box for contributions for the Record will be found at Hoadley's.
In two weeks, S. S. Boyce, of the Senior class, will publish the Pot Pourri.
'74. Pearce Barnes abides in his native hamlet for the space of a few weeks.
Hall, port-bow of S. S. crew, has lost a hand by an accident in a saw-mill.
A Theologue was actually heard last week to refuse anything stronger than lemonade.
'75. C. H. Thomas will aid Ferry, '72, in the compiling of the Banner this year.
One hundred and twenty-five now at the Commons, and many turned empty away.
Seventy Juniors will gaze at the tarry heavens from the Astronomy division this year.
The peaceful slumbers of our worthy reporter are nightly disturbed by the singing of Bingo.
Prof. Packard assures us that none need fear that the Freshman class will be inordinately large.
Prof. Dole tarries at Amherst yet a little while longer, but will be back here in a few weeks.
The bow of the University crew says that he wasn't the last man in, in the regatta, anyhow.
E. C. Towne, a graduate of the Yale Theological school, will edit the College Courant this year.

THE YALE RECORD.

The following is the scheme of Senior studies. The class is divided into two alphabetical divisions for recitation in all studies but German and Latin. For these they are divided into two, according to scholarship. The recitations in Political Economy and Intellectual Philosophy are in the morning immediately following prayers, alternating with each other for each division. Those in History and Astronomy are at 11:30 A.M., on all days in the week but Wednesdays and Saturdays, on which days the class receives lectures from Prof. Sumner and Pres. Porter, respectively. German and Latin are recited in the afternoons of all days of the week but Wednesdays and Saturdays, there being two recitations per week for each division in all studies but Political Economy and Intellectual Philosophy, in which there are three.

An exchange is responsible for the statement that at Dartmouth College no more Greek text books are to be used. In their place printed slips are distributed at each recitation containing the next day's lesson, and when it has been recited they are collected. It is expected that in this way the good scholars will be encouraged and the poor ones confounded, for this method affords no opportunity for the use of translations or for that peculiar method of cheating known at Yale as " cribbing. " At least one objection presents itself—that by choosing passages at random, now here, now there, the student will be prevented from getting any connected idea of the author he is reading, or of the subject treated of. Still, as it is a move toward more thorough scholarship, it is a move in the right direction. We shall await the result with considerable curiosity, for if the plan is a success at Dartmouth, may not the powers that be introduce it to our personal acquaintance?

There are two things we must not omit to notice—the Freshman rain of last week, and the Senioric salute every morning.
Van Buren will be monitor at Trinity this year. We demand that the reading room be opened before Chapel. We must read before we pray. The Freshman class reads each year the two books of Homer, succeeding those of the previous year. His class will cease to walk the absence of the illustrious Arthur Biddle in the early part of Oct.

An individual who passed an examination for the Scientific School six years ago, has just entered, this fall.

The gas lamp in the entry of Alumni Hall has the warning is unnecessary.

Dr. Harwood and Prof. Sumner, of Yale, finished this summer the translation of Lange's Commentary on II Kings.

The faculty have decided that it is useless to require a bond from Theologues wishing the use of the college library.

The Theologe now aspires for the vain glory of being called up, promptly responded, "Absent on review, sir."

There are seven from Andover in the Freshman class, and from East Hampton eleven out of a graduating class of thirty-six.

Rumor has it that the prowess of the Sophomores and Freshmen will be displayed in the rush at Hamilton Park next Saturday.

Mr. Chatfield is publishing to the Juniors, by subscription, a pony on Arrian's Anabasis, translated by Greene Kendrick, '72.

There are now fifteen editors in the Academic department, twelve of whom are in the Senior class. Not a very good season for editors, either.

James Heyward of Amherst, '72, has entered the Senior class at Yale, with a view, probably, of finding out what Yale knows about boating.

Geo. S. Brown, '74, is acting as Principal of the High School in New Britain for a few weeks. We understand the school is making great progress.

The gymnasium has been rendered fairly irresistible by whitewash and scrubbing. In the basement new wood-work improves the appearance of the wash stand.

There was an opportunity afforded last Saturday for all to witness in the Senior class crew on the harbor the same quick stroke that won us fame last summer.

For the rest of the term, afternoon services will be held in Marquand Chapel. Ex-President Woolsey will deliver a course of lectures on the Old Testament.

A Sophomore bent on campaigning, having made himself very agreeable to a Freshman on the way up from the depot, was favored with the request that he would chum with him.

There was a railroad accident on Tuesday, the tenth inst., on the Penn. Central R. R., near Harrisburgh. Of a number of students who were aboard, none were hurt.

The city fathers have given fair warning that they will treat students who rush as severely as anybody else who disturbs the peace. Judging from the past the warning is unnecessary.

One of the crews at Springfield last summer had a Jew in its number, who refused to practice on Saturday, and as the rest would not row Sunday, two days of practice were lost every week.

The following is vouched for: Fresh and Junior en route to Charlie Bradley's. Fresh (innocently): "Would you prefer a game supper or a wine supper?" Junior (emphatically): "Both!"

About seventy of the class of '74 attended the funeral of their classmate, Arthur C. Tibbals, in Meriden on Monday last. Messrs. Bushnell, Wickes, Munroe, Evans, Cuyler and Grover, acted as pall bearers.

The following are the division officers of the respective classes in order of divisions: Seniors (divided alphabetically), Prof. Wheeler and Sumner. Juniors, Prof. Hadley, Tutors Thacher and Beers. Sophomores, Prof. Newton, Tutors Coy and Hooker. Freshmen, Profs. Packard, Richards, Wright, and Tutor Hooker.

At the meeting of the Berkeley Association last Friday evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: Pres., Gardiner Greene, '73; Sec., DeW. C. Holbrook, '74; Treas., G. P. Torrence, '75. A committee, consisting of Johnes, Peters and Van Buren, will make arrangements for a course of sermons similar to that of last year, to be delivered next term.

As the train on which '74 were returning from Meriden entered Wallingford, the engine struck the back part of a wagon containing an Irishman, with his wife, baby and two or three small children. The wagon was completely wrecked, and the man and his family scattered about promiscuously. W. E. D. Stokes promptly rescued the infant, and restored it to the arms of the frantic mother.

AMUSEMENTS.

Wednesday, Sept. 18, Worcester Guard Ball.

Thursday, 19, Barnabee Concert Troupe.

Saturday, 21, Minnie Foster.

Monday, 23, Maggie Mitchell.

Thursday, 26, Do. do.

Friday, 27, Tom Thumb.

Saturday, 28, Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels.
SUPPLEMENT TO THE YALE RECORD.

We publish, this week, a supplement, in addition to the regular edition of The Record, for the purpose of giving correctly, the names of the incoming classes. Copies of The Record, with supplement, wrapped for mailing, may be had without extra charge at Hoadley's.

THE JUBILEE.

There is one matter that needs immediate attention, and that is the 12th Annual Thanksgiving Jubilee. Original plays should be obtained, if possible; a sermon and poem prepared; and a "yard stick" of suitable length procured. All these things and more are necessary to the success of the affair, and should be looked to immediately. We trust that the gentleman who has been empowered to select the committee will do so at once.

The Jubilee is about all that remains of the "customs" once peculiar to Yale. And it is the only time in the whole year when all classes can come together for an evening of entertainment. It is hoped that Yale students of to-day are far enough in advance of their worthy ancestors in the path of civilization to warrant a removal of some of the restrictions that have hitherto robbed the Jubilee of much of its pleasure, and that all will brace up in aid of the committee in their efforts to concentrate in this entertainment the essence of a whole year's wit, enjoyment and frolic.

Just after we went to press this week, accounts reached us of as pretty a little quarrel as we have heard of in a long time. It seems that the Sophs were initiating some Freshmen into Delta Kappa, and for that purpose had closed the doors of their hall. Some upper classmen and graduates, who might have been in better business, it seems to us, demanded admission, and upon its being refused, proceeded to force their way in with an ax and crowbar.

Some under classmen who ventured to remonstrate, were summarily drenched with water, and one who was hit on the head with an umbrella, borrowed, we presume, created quite a sensation by fainting away. When, at last, an entrance was forced, the Sophs were uncrownedly kicked out of their own hall.

ON THE CAMPUS.

Class Boy, Sept. 18, to William A. Copp, '69. Cook, '75, will continue to pull on the University crew this year.

Frank Brown, '72, and F. O. Maxson, S. S. S., '72, are teaching at Norwich.

Maxwell, '74, has returned to his class, and will remain on the University nine.

A member of the State Legislature of last May enters the Scientific School this fall.

Delta Kappa had a campaign supper last night on the occasion of giving over the society to the Freshmen.

The following are the names of the Senior class crew: Day (stroke), McCook, Russell, Meyer, F. Adee, Boyce (bow).

Messrs. Buckingham, Chamberlin, McIntire, Meyer and Webster, of the Senior class in college, are also attending the Junior course of lectures at the Law School.

At the college meeting held yesterday afternoon, Nevins, '74, was chosen captain of the University nine, and Benton, '73, was empowered to choose a committee for the purpose of making arrangements for the Thanksgiving Jubilee, and was instructed to report in the columns of The Record.

We earnestly entreat the members of the Freshman class to by no means slight the opportunity afforded them in the annual rush to-morrow at Hamilton Park, of establishing a spirit of union which, being founded on community of hardship, will remain with them during their course. Let a goodly number be present.
THE INCOMING CLASSES.
The following is the official list of the incoming classes of the Theological, Law, Academic and Scientific departments.

THEOLOGICAL SCHOOL.
