YALE UNIVERSITY
SCHOOL OF NURSING
SALUTATION FROM THE DEAN'S OFFICE

Another eventful year is about to close, and as in former periods the School has steadily made advances. Many new and progressive steps have been taken since our greetings sent out to you through the Alumnae News announcing the graduation of the tenth class of thirty-eight students. The 1936 graduating class will number thirty-nine. We had hoped it might be forty, but one of its members, due to a long and tedious illness, will be prevented from receiving her degree until a later date. You will recall that the first class numbered nine graduates, and as they return in June for their second five-year-reunion they will rejoice with us to know that this year the number of graduates has increased four-fold and over.

But numbers of students alone, while significant, are not sufficient criteria by which to evaluate the progress of the School. The achievement of the graduates in their fields of professional work is a far more potent appraising factor in estimating the worth-whileness of the School. Indeed, it is largely to the loyal and wholesome influence of our own graduates, broadly scattered throughout this country, and in not a few instances in other lands, that the prestige of the School has been maintained and its value further made known. In the future, the number of young women who will make application for entrance into this and even into other schools, may be determined by how well we are able to serve the community in its needs and how valuable a contribution we make to nursing and to nursing education wherever we may be placed. Let us not for a moment forget that we are known and judged not so often by what we think, as by what we do.

When the Class of 1936 receives the degree of Bachelor of Nursing, the School will have to its credit two hundred and seventy-one graduates, ably prepared by "nature and nurture" to assist in overcoming conditions which have for centuries menaced the health and happiness of human beings.

I wonder if we pause frequently enough to realize for what we stand and what important factors nurses are in so great an objective. I think we often take our mission in life too casually and do not appreciate the fact that the world expects of nurses great and important things. It is obvious that we must constantly be alert and keen to seize the opportunities, as they pass us by, oftentimes with only a suggestion of their presence.

To fail to maintain consistently our ideals and standards will be disastrous to the primary objective for which the School was established and for which it stands today, and it is to you, its graduates, that we look for the fulfillment of its promise. You have a rich heritage and one which carries with it great responsibility. As we study the biographical sketches printed each year in the bulletin of the School, we are thrilled as we realize the many positions of importance its graduates are occupying after only a single decade since its first class went forth as professional nurses.

It is generally accepted that nursing is one of the most efficiently organized of the professions for women, and it is largely to this fact that nursing owes the position it holds among the fields of work in which women participate. There is nothing intrinsic in organization itself. The real value of our professional nursing organizations has in the past emanated from the women who were their leaders, and who with unusual co-operation and vision formed themselves into groups and committees through which to set forth the high ideals with which they were imbued, and at the same time to strive to overcome the popular prejudices against the broader education of nurses.

In the earlier days there were no university schools. Hospital schools, some of which were established with high educational ideals, existed in different parts of the country, and here women of culture received their own professional education and directed that of their students. It was from such schools as these the early leaders were recruited. These women were the pioneers in developing the concept that unity of purpose, the establishment of ideals and standards, the collaboration in conferences, and the broad exchange of ideas were essential to progress in the building up of a profession so vital to human happiness as is nursing.

Out of this far-reaching concept, the nursing organizations were developed; first, the Society of Superintendents of Nurses of the United States and Canada, now called the National League of Nursing Education; the great American Nurses Association, of which we all are members, organized as The Associated Alumnae; and lastly, the National Organization for Public Health Nursing. These associations are known as The Three National Nursing Organizations, which meet together biennially as a great congress of nurses to forward the objectives for which they one and all do firmly stand.

Perhaps as you read, you wonder what function this message has in the Alumnae News, and how it is concerned with the progress and vital interests of the graduates of the School. Need we answer the query? Suffice it to say that the pioneer days are not yet over. University schools are just beginning and the graduates from these schools must take their places shoulder to shoulder with others who have for the past half-century blazed the trail in the development of nursing education for nursing service, and who will soon be ready to relinquish to you their responsibilities. Such is inevitable in the wheel of change, widening and expanding but still unbroken as it continues to revolve.

If nursing eventually is to become a part of the general system of education, graduates from university schools must demonstrate through their achievements that higher education for nurses has values and these cannot be fully realized while nursing schools are separated from the educational system of the country. They must also demonstrate that the nursing work of the world can be better accomplished by women who have experienced such advantages. It is not enough to say we believe in this idea. We must prove by our achievements that it has sound implications.

Unusual things are being done today in nursing. Extensive studies, for the purpose of evolving a new and better curriculum for the guidance of schools of nursing, are being carried on. Ideas and theories for the accreditation of schools of nursing are much in the air. Following the report of the Committee on the Grading of Schools of Nursing, the League has been actively engaged in studying systems and plans for the accreditation of other types of schools for the purpose of determining whether any of the prevailing systems might be adapted to the evaluation or approval of schools of nursing.

The Association of Collegiate Schools of Nursing is wielding an influence in extending the thought that schools of nursing should be associated with institutions of higher learning, and as the years advance this ideal will become more and more an accepted fact.

The practical and personal question before you is how best to make your contribution to the continued development of the profession you have accepted as your own. Few people contribute their best talents to any movement by remaining apart from the large body of workers. For this reason you can make your most valuable contribution, and in return grow yourselves to your fullest stature by taking an active part in the work of the nursing organizations. In this participation your own viewpoint will be broadened, and by association with others you will learn to know something of the general problems which constantly confront not only your own colleagues but members of the profession as a whole.

University schools of nursing are still not numerous but each year their graduates are appreciably increasing. The organizations need those of you who have had unusual opportunities, and you in turn need the knowledge and perspective you will obtain by working with others who are striving for similar objectives. The great objective of nursing education is not that nursing may, as a profession, be placed on a more enviable plane, but that nurses themselves may be more adequately equipped to fulfill the primary function of all nursing. Effie J. Taylor.

FACULTY NOTES

Miss Augusta Patton is to take a year's rest from her active work on our faculty. This summer she will be at the University of Vermont, teaching Ward Management to prospective administrators. Her work here will be taken over by Ruth Lyman, '31.

By the appointment of Dr. Elinor Beebe to the Faculty of the School as Assistant Professor of Public Health Nursing, a long time ideal has become a reality. We have now on the Faculty a public health nurse with a full time appointment.
THE ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION
Organization of Regional Groups

In informal and formal sessions during the year the alumnae officers and committee chairmen have been working on the organizations of regional groups of the alumnae, as agreed upon in the annual meeting of June 1935. This program first necessitated two new address files, one with the names and addresses of all graduates arranged in alphabetical order, the other with the cards arranged according to general geographical distribution of our graduates. Then the pin map was set up to show the provincial members of the alumnae executive committee the distances between Yale nurses who are far away. This revealed that in many instances a Yale alumna is still the only one of her kind in a vast area. While we wait for more pins to be placed in the Rocky Mountains and in other regions, it has still been possible to initiate the regional group project.

The hearty response from the alumnae who were asked to form local groups has been most inspiring and in keeping with our tradition of rallying for our common enthusiasm, the Yale University School of Nursing.

In New York, Anne Goodrich Waters called the first meeting on March 24th. Fourteen members from a possible thirty-five in the Metropolitan area were present and Audria Gardner, '34, was made permanent chairman. The next meeting was tentatively set for the middle of May.

The alumnae of Philadelphia and vicinity met, seven strong, on April 6th. Mary Taylor Swoboda, '26, was made permanent chairman and Jeannette Moore, '32, secretary and treasurer.

Boston and environs contributes sixteen members, ten of whom were present for the first meeting on March 24th, called by Elizabeth Bixler, '27, who was made permanent chairman. Elizabeth Howland, '32, was made secretary and treasurer. By way of publicity, the organization of this group was written up in the Boston papers.

The Providence group, with Frances Thielbar as acting chairman, are at present so few in number that they have asked to be part of the Boston group until they are numerous enough for an organization of their own.

The alumnae of Bridgeport and vicinity, Gertrude Zurrer, acting chairman, have expressed a similar desire to be affiliated with the New Haven group until they are more numerous.
In San Francisco, Eleanor King is acting chairman for a group of seven alumnae.

Jean Hill in Portland, Maine, acting chairman for the Maine group, has been waiting for the floods to subside to call a meeting.

Mollie Curtis in Seattle, Washington, has been in touch with the alumnae, for whom she is acting chairman.

At an alumnae meeting in New Haven on March 16th, the local Yale nurses organized the New Haven group, and made Hazel Bowles, '30, their chairman, and Lois Bliss, '31, secretary.

The response of all who were asked to bring the groups together has been most gratifying. The president wishes to take this opportunity to thank them, and all the others who have written to announce meetings or to relate progress made. Each group will be asked for its report on June 16th. In the meantime, the school and the alumnae cannot fail to profit by this extension of group thought and activity into various parts of the country.

Reunion for 1926 and 1931

1936 marks a decade of professional achievement for the first graduates of the Yale School of Nursing. The class of 1931 celebrates their five-year anniversary at this time. These two classes are to be honored particularly in alumnae activities this year. Charlotte Birley Lindskog will act as reunion chairman for the class of 1926, and Ruth Lyman will serve in the same capacity for 1931. All Y.S.N. graduates look forward to welcoming back a large number of these two classes.

First Alumnae Congress

The dictionary defines congress as "a gathering to consider matters of common interest." So the above has been designated as the title for the alumnae professional program for June 15th and 16th. Dean Taylor suggested and is generously arranging these meetings. It is very fitting that after the ten-year period of professional activity by Yale graduates, all alumnae should return to New Haven for consideration of nursing as well as for renewal of all friendly contacts with each other and the school. Hazel Bowles, chairman of the New Haven regional group, and Assistant Professor of Pediatric Nursing, will assist Dean Taylor in connection with the program which appears below.

My dear Colleagues:

It is with deep regret that I find it will not be possible for me to be in New Haven for Commencement this year, and therefore for the tenth reunion of the first graduating class of the Yale School of Nursing. The Association of Collegiate Schools of Nursing convenes in San Francisco that week, and as President, since I was absent last year, you will understand that I must be there.

You will perhaps be interested to know something of my activities this past year, during which I have been privileged to observe and study the developments in the field of nursing and nursing education in several States in this country and on the European Continent.

It is immensely heartening that, despite the many problems within the profession, and the profoundly disturbing conditions in the world at large, there is irrefutable evidence of steady professional advancement as expressed through the requirements of higher standards of general education for admission to schools of nursing, professional curricula that recognize the place of the social sciences in nursing education, and, lastly, the very definite effort, however differing in expression, to integrate the various branches of nursing into a coordinated service that the health and sickness needs within each community may be more adequately met.

At the invitation of the Yale School of Nursing I spoke last year in some detail of the social outlook and the progressive health and welfare work in Minnesota. In May of last year I received an invitation from the International Florence Nightingale Foundation, through its President, Dame Alicia Lloyd-Still, to present the certificates to the first group of students completing the course at Bedford College, London University. I was also invited to give a series of lectures during a two weeks institute under the auspices of the London College of Nursing. This brought me in contact with many interesting English nurses, as well as with the International Students, 21 in number and a group of exceptionally fine young women.
Following the institute, a series of visits was arranged to English industrial cities, a most impressive feature of which was the comprehensive housing plan that gives promise in the not distant future of the complete obliteration of the slums.

I must also mention the School health program administered under the Ministry of Education, the extensive provisions of which are quite unique.

Following my English visits, and accompanied by Miss Baggallay, Secretary of the Florence Nightingale Memorial Foundation and instructor in public health nursing, I visited ten countries on the European Continent to observe the health and nursing work and the educational programs in relation to the international courses in London.

In every city we were met by graduates of the International Course when under the League of Red Cross Societies, or of the present Foundation which is administered, as you know, jointly by the International Council of Nurses and the League of Red Cross Societies.

I wish time and space permitted a detailed account of this interesting and inspiring experience, but again I can only mention the high spots.

When visiting Poland in 1925, two health centers were being developed in Warsaw, the first two. Today there are over two hundred and fifty established throughout the country. Poland has passed a law governing the practice of nursing, the provisions of which give greater prospect of achieving the desired result than any law in this country.

In Finland, that marvellous little country of vast area and a population of approximately 3,000,000 only, we found the most modern institutions for the sick, from the standpoint of construction and equipment, and the most progressive program for the mentally ill that I have ever seen.

In every country we were impressed by the fine type of women, leaders in a profession of growing importance in their country, and many of whom had had their vision broadened, their lives enriched and their professional interest deepened by the program of studies in London, or by experience in this country and Canada through Visiting or Study Fellowships from the Rockefeller Foundation.

On my return to the United States in September, I almost immediately commenced a series of lectures under the auspices of the recently created Department of Nursing Education of the University of Pennsylvania, my subject the first semester being "Modern Trends in Nursing,' and this present semester, "Modern Trends in Nursing Education." It has been a stimulating, if somewhat anxious experience to make this contribution to the large group of students that assemble weekly, since many of them have made or are making valuable contribution as administrators or teachers and are therefore better qualified to give instruction in these subjects.

It has been a joy to find in Philadelphia a number of graduates of our School. Wherever I go, whether on this or other Continents, I am profoundly impressed by the Yale influence. It would be difficult to over-estimate the indebtedness of the nursing profession to the Rockefeller Foundation and Yale University, through whom the School became possible, and I personally must always be grateful for my association with the faculty whose devotion to their profession enabled them to surmount the arising problems. And above all am I grateful to the Alumnae Association, whose contribution, both as undergraduates and graduates, to a life activity of greater significance and potentiality than the public has as yet grasped, is immeasurable.

With warmest greetings and an earnest wish for the continued success of every member, believe me,

Faithfully yours,

THE STUDENT COUNCIL

The Student Council has been active this year in sponsoring teas, informal dances, after-dinner coffees, etc. It is also trying to foster an interest among the students in the Battell Chapel Services, in connection with which there is to be a Vesper Service on May 10th in commemoration of Florence Nightingale, at which Miss Goodrich will speak.

THE SCHOLARSHIP LOAN FUND

The "Opportunity Sale" for the benefit of the Scholarship Loan Fund, which seems now to have become an annual institution, was planned this year for the first week in April. The adjacent streams, however, chose this most inopportune time to overflow their banks, and as the Red Cross sent out urgent pleas for clothing for the nearby flood victims it seemed quite un fitting that we should sell our collection of articles for our own benefits when we might aid this worthy cause. Plans for the Opportunity Sale were therefore abandoned, washed away, so to speak, by the flood.

It seemed unthinkable that the Alumnae Association should contribute nothing this year to the loan fund, so the original committee "got on the ball" and launched a White Elephant Sale and Entertainment. The committee:

Mildred Twiss .................. General Chairman
Shirley Harvey .................... Publicity
Ruth Johnson ....................... Collection
Helen Wersebe .................... Entertainment
Anne Ryle ........................ Food

deserves a great deal of credit for the success of this function, which netted $110.00.
EPISTOLARY EXTRACTS

From Jane Mett, '30, who has been "curing" at Trudeau Sanatorium:

"At last—I begin to feel almost human and quite normal. I've reached the point where I now take my own bath and that in a tub! The first in more than three years! Quite an experience.

In a couple of months I expect to be moved to a cottage. Life then takes on quite a normal aspect; one goes to the dining-room for meals and is eventually allowed exercise and greater activities of all kinds."

From Eleanor King, '32: "I'm enjoying San Francisco and California immensely. Grace and I and others take numerous trips to points mountainous, sea-sidey, deserty, etc., and I have really seen more of the west now than I saw of the east all the many years spent there. The first semester I taught the entering students and got them launched on the wards fairly successfully; this semester I'm doing home-visiting for the well-baby clinic (showing mothers about baths, codliver oil, orange juice, formula, and having a generally vicarious parenthood) and running the clinic itself on its two afternoons a week. It's a grand way of seeing all the city. As far as I know, my hospital days are dead and buried. The future is as yet unsettled, but I aim for public health work from now on."

Later: "On July 1, I start being a staff nurse in the San Miguel County, New Mexico, maternal and child health program. Believe it or not!

Here's to mammas and babies, white, Mexican, Indian . . . . and ranchos, rattlesnakes, dust storms, the wide open spaces, and The Altogether Unknown. I'm a little scared . . . . and terribly excited!

The first week in June, Grace and I are spending in Oregon. If we are anywhere near Peter and Gross or Jessie Munger or Lou Hanson, we shall, of course, look them up.

After that, I shall probably go home for the rest of the month, get me a little Ford roadster there, and drive to the new job."
Helen Noyes McKay, '30, in her news letter expresses very well (we hope) the feeling of all of the Y. S. N. Alumnae: "By all means let's get the organization of regional groups under way. You folks still in active nursing can't begin to understand how much such a thing could mean to those of us who are 'out of it.' I often wonder if it is possible for a nurse ever to be completely satisfied with a non-nursing existence. I've been rebelling against it for the past two years—and although I'm getting some contacts with it now—I can see where this group idea would provide an excellent outlet for some of our professional yearnings. It would give us at least a chance to talk with someone sharing our own interests—what wouldn't I have given a good many times to have seen one Yale nurse looming up over the horizon, if only for a little chat. More power to the idea—I only tremble for fear that Maine has too small a number to organize. Here's hoping—.""

Helen has been putting her nursing knowledge to good use at every opportunity—in the care of her own son Donald, helping with sick children, home deliveries, and in the teaching of a course in Hygiene in the high school.

Adelle Baldwin Lanoue, '31, writes from the Belgian Congo: "Furlough time draws near—if there is money to take us home. We will have been here almost four years when we leave. We are feeling the drag of the climate now, and as each week passes it is more of an effort to keep our end up. We have both had severe fevers . . . . I am enjoying the medical work exceedingly, though I run up against problems which are beyond me. How I wish I were even half a doctor. The medical work is not taking the place of my teaching, but is in addition to it. So you see that I keep my hands well out of mischief! . . . .

"Mission work is all to the good. I am sure that in practical matters of living, alone, the work of missions is worth while. It certainly requires all the abilities a person has, to say nothing of patience, perseverance (all of which I have little), and an understanding that you must go slowly or you frighten the people off."

If Adelle gets home this year it will be just too late for her to join us at commencement, but if she is in New York next year, as she plans to be, we hope to see her often.
Charlotte Life, '33, was married in June 1935, to a chemical engineer and is now living in Augusta, Kansas. Her classmates who sat patiently through Socialist and Communist meetings with her will be amused to know that she now has a Girl Scout Troop of her own, is a member of an austere and sedate Girl Scout Council, votes Republican ticket and generally conducts herself like a normal citizen. She was unable to get a School Nurse job which she wanted because public sentiment is against the employment of married women. To bad, it's obviously their loss!

Elizabeth Ferguson, '34, writes: "Beginning May 1st I am to be a nurse-midwife with the State Department of Health in Maryland. To begin with I shall be at La Plata in Charles County. Later my territory will increase. I am to do teaching and supervision of the local midwives, and midwifery work too. This will be the first work of this type in the state under the Social Security Act. I wish more of the Yale nurses were interested in field work in Public Health. They are so badly needed and many of them don't make use of that very excellent training they receive there in Public Health work."

Dorothy Ingraham, '35, has given up her work with the Louisville V. N. A. for a position as county nurse in the Carter County Health Department, Elizabethton, Tennessee. Her work includes the examination of school children, giving immunizations, direction of infant and preschool clinics, venereal clinics, visiting T.B. cases and doing follow-up on their many communicable disease cases. There are only two nurses to do all this so no doubt Dorothy will be kept out of mischief.

Bunny Lacount Cowan, '32, apparently busies herself keeping house, calling church campaigns, sponsoring parties (the word chaperoning is taboo out where she is), playing reader for her husband's 219 history exams, teaching Sunday School, entering sociological discussions in a study club, and taking part in Red Cross activities to promote an interest in the organization of a health unit (a city M.D., a health director, 4 nurses, and a clerk). The town, Muskogee, Oklahoma, a hamlet of 32,000 now has but one part-time nurse. What a paradise for the Y. S. N.!
Barbara Munson, '28, has apparently transferred Fitkin 3 to the West Coast and is inspiring the Californians with pediatric dogma.

Eleanor Harmon Batchelder, '31, resides on a farm at the foot of Mt. Gunstock in the White Mts. In the winter she and her husband run a lodge for skiers and in the summer they cultivate the soil.

Margaret Pettigrew Westbrook, '30, has been giving talks on Young People's Personal Problems to 500 high school girls in the West Hartford High School. She is also the voluntary chairman of the Health Education Committee of the Hartford Y.W.C.A.

Dorothy E. Peck, '32, has been a student this year at Teachers College, Columbia University, and expects to receive an M.A. degree in Public Health Nursing this June. She is now looking for a job in Rural Nursing.

Ann Hotchkiss, '34, is in Pittsburgh, Pa., teaching Medical and Surgical Nursing at St. John's Hospital, doing ward supervision in Mercy Hospital, and teaching Health Education at Duquesne University.

Fran McCormick, '34, is also in Pittsburgh, teaching Pediatric Nursing at Mercy Hospital and is also planning the Educational program of students in their dispensary. She is teaching Obstetrical and Pediatric Nursing at St. John's, and at Duquesne she is teaching "Ward Management."

Ruth Vrooman, '33, has been sojourning in Florida. Nursing or loafing?

Kay Tierney, '33, is in California with her family—attending all the races.

Gladys Sweeney, '26, and her recently acquired husband, a Sergeant-Major in the U. S. Army, have dreams of settling in a little bungalow on one of the Hawaiian beaches; at present they are living in Albany. Gladys has given up nursing in favor of a marital career.
Sophia Fischer, '33, guides the health and morals of 2000 grade school students in her home town, Easton, Pa. She plans to study for her M.A. in School Nursing under Dr. Manzer at N. Y. U. this summer.

Priscilla Halpert, '27, has commuted this year between home and Dr. Halpert in Brooklyn Heights, and the Y. U. S. N. and the class of 1938 in New Haven. During the spring she traveled afield under the auspices of the Commonwealth Fund conducting nursing institutes in six of their rural hospitals.

The Halpers go abroad in May for two months vacation.

Lillias Duncan Adams, '34, will act as office nurse when Dr. Adams opens offices for pediatric practice in Kingsport, Tennessee, on July 1st.

Laura Burrow, '33, took an active part in the Red Cross Nursing work during the recent flood crisis in West Virginia.

Virginia Raymond Lothrop, '35, with her husband and baby, is sailing May 25th for France. Guy is to study there for one year after which he will return to West Point as French Instructor for four years.

Karin Ekblom Engstrom, '34, and her young daughter Solvay will sojourn in Finland this summer.

Marguerite Luce, '31, is still at the American Presbyterian Mission Hospital at Chefoo, Shantung, China. She has spent another eight months at language study again—hoping soon to have mastered Chinese well enough to teach in it. By this time she is back at hospital work supervising the Medical-Pediatric wards and the Training School. She also takes an active part in the mission work. Though traveling is difficult and distances long, she has managed, during vacation periods, to visit a number of our other friends there—including Dorothy Hull (former instructor at Y. S. N.), Mary Sun Liang, '31, and Charlotte Stringham, '32. Maybe next year we will have some first-hand news from them.
Mollie Curtis, '31, writes that 'the future foreseen for me in the Class Prophecy has come to pass—earrings are now part of my official uniform. I wear them day and night, on and off duty. That, I am sorry to say, serves up the news about me.'

She adds the suggestion that any Y. S. N. nurses attending the convention in Los Angeles might enjoy a return via Seattle or Vancouver. 'The weather here at that time is almost certain to be glorious with scenery which equals it. And of course there are plenty of us who would be glad to help with a little sight-seeing.'

Jane Foster, '35, is College nurse at Reade College, Portland, Oregon, and is also working for her B.A. degree.

Dorothy Birney, '35, is living with Kay Sprague, '35, who is with the Brooklyn V. N. A. Dorothy is deep in music—studying the viola, after which she expects to join the VanBuren String Quartet—scheduled to go on tour in Europe this summer.

Anne Leffingwell, '35, in between dodging earthquakes, is making a T.B. case finding survey of the state of Montana.

Dorothy Aldrich, '31, is at present ward charge nurse in St. Luke's Hospital, Boise, Idaho. Her classmates have waited and are still waiting for responses to their missives.

Marion Godelm, '33, sails on the Berengeria on June 17th for an extended visit to France, England, Germany, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, and Lapland.

Beatrice Stockwell, '33, has what compares to an executive mansion at Davidson House Infirmary, Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn.

Dottie Huey, '31, this past year has helped in the reorganization of the health service and is directing the nursing service at Isham Infirmary, Andover Academy, Andover, Massachusetts. Her assistants are Kathryn Park, '31, and Marjorie Everingham, '32. Yale-at-Andover, eh what?
Lucille Olson Pond, '34, has now recovered from a long illness and is displaying the fine points of Nursing 151 on the private ward of the University of California Hospital.

Edna Hutchinson, '35, an Instructor of Nursing in Yale in China, School of Nursing, Changsha, Hunan, China, is learning to master the various Chinese dialects.

Jessie Munger, '32, plans to study for her Ph.D. in psychology to prepare for teaching in Public Health Nursing.

Elizabeth Bixler, '27, sails June 27th for a trip through northern Europe, the Scandinavian countries, and Russia—at last. Her excuse this time is to visit some of the Psychiatric Hospitals along the way.

Ruth Burcham, '33, has resigned her position with the New Haven V. N. A. to take effect in August. Her plans for the future are as yet uncertain.

It is with regret that we must record in this issue the first death which has occurred in our alumnae association.

Lora G. Neal, '32, died in Wilmington, Delaware, on May 1, 1936, after an illness of several months.

To her family we extend our deepest sympathy.
