FROM OUR DEAN

Greetings to our dear family at home and elsewhere.

It is with deep gratitude that again I have the privilege to send you a word of greeting, since the year that has passed has been one filled with strange and confusing episodes involving the life and welfare of nations and people throughout the world. To those of us who dwell in a land where liberty is enjoyed, the situation in Europe is incomprehensible.

Although it was my great good fortune to spend last summer in Europe, visiting a number of national nursing organizations in membership with the International Council of Nurses and schools of various types, I did not realize that war might be so imminent until one night, while visiting at the Florence Nightingale School in St. Thomas' Hospital, London, we witnessed the first blackout and the staging of an aerial flight simulating enemy planes and defense planes in an attack on the city of London.

In company with Miss Gladys Hillyers, the Matron of St. Thomas', members of the nursing staff and several hospital officials, we visited every ward, corridor and special room in the hospital to inspect the lighting system and the devices installed to disguise its identity and position. Only a minimum number of lights to insure the safety of patients were permitted within the wards. These were shaded with blue, and were hung so low that no reflection of light was observable to persons within the grounds nor from the streets surrounding the building. Black shades were securely drawn over every window and opening in wards and corridors. These shut out even the smallest beam of light which might be reflected from the tiny lamp required at the bedside of a patient when a treatment or examination was necessary.

Until early morning we walked along the river terrace and watched the barges passing up and down, and the busses, trams and motorcars crossing the Waterloo bridge to the right of the hospital. At midnight the lights in the tower, from which Big Ben for years and years has pealed out the hours of day and night, and has shed its light over the Houses of Parliament and Westminster Abbey, were suddenly darkened and concurrently the chimes were silenced. No lights were anywhere apparent save the head light on the river barges and the low lights on the motor vehicles as they traversed and retraversed the many bridges which spanned the gloomy and terrifying river. A night such as this, when nurses, doctors and trained members of the civilian population, responding to warning calls, donned their tin hats, threw their gas-masks across their shoulders, and carried in their hands bags equipped for the giving of first-aid to casualties along the streets, will remain vividly fixed within my memory. These drills were carried out with great precision and in a spirit of reality and earnestness, as daily the fear that war could not be averted became a deep conviction.

Children were practicing for the evacuation of their schools into the country, and in the event of disaster means were provided for the transfer of all civilian patients to hospitals in the outlying country districts.

I left England depressed and very anxious, as I had been given an intimate and personal insight into the vital and harrowing situations into which many of our friends, some of whom had been our visitors, might soon be plunged. The handwriting upon the wall could be plainly and distinctly read, even to one not wholly conversant with the political and social disagreements in which the nations of Europe were involved. The nurses, and I might also say the people everywhere, prayed for a peaceful settlement of international difficulties, for no one was eager for the war which appeared to be inevitable.

I had planned to go to Czechoslovakia to visit our colleague, Dr. Amalia Houzvicova, Class of 1934, but to my great regret I could not get a passport to enter that country, and I have had no letter from her since my return.

Another of our graduates I hoped also to see was Dr. Maria Vaitch, and I had made arrangements to visit her in her home in Zagreb, Yugoslavia. Again, due to misinformation concerning passport regulations, I failed to get the proper type of visa. The one I secured allowed me only to pass through the country into Hungary, and thus I missed the pleasure of the visit. A letter from Doctor Vaitch, which came to me after I arrived at home assured me of her disappointment. She wrote that it would be quite impossible for her to come to America in 1941, but she was proud to realize that she was not forgotten by her own School, since for many reasons she had given up her nursing career five years ago. She described her present work as follows:

"I shall state in a few lines about my present work. I am in charge of a public health station in the western part of the country. We are having well baby clinics, dispensaries, and supervise the school children. We meet the needs of approximately 11,000 children yearly. I am having just one nurse—one of the best ones—and a girl clerk. With the number of visits mentioned above, we can do very little in home visiting. So I am a pediatrician, but all the teaching and advising I could scarcely do without my nursing education. Our physicians do it rather rarely, while intelligent mothers appreciate the fact very much. The success of my work in these five years is recognized by the community and is a great satisfaction for myself."

"The town has 20,000 inhabitants, most of them peasants, that being the richest agricultural part of our country. We are having quite a nice, intellectual
I am under the impression that letters now and then to Doctor Houzvicova and to Doctor Vaitch from their classmates would do a great deal to stimulate and help them during these very distressing times. They are both very fine and courageous women.

Many of you will like to know that when I visited Spain in July I met two of our old friends and former special students, Miss Purificacion Canosa and Miss Manolita Ricart. They were delighted to see a friend from Yale, and to have the opportunity of telling me, first-hand, about the revolution in Spain in which they participated, with other nurses whom we know. One of our former international students from Spain lost her life during the war, and two of the others are now at work in South America.

My letter to you at this time must not be confined to troubles abroad. You want news of your School and of its progress.

The year that has passed has not been too greatly different from other years, and nothing of a very serious nature has happened to cause us great anxiety. While we have not been bowed down by adversity, I can not recall that we have been greatly elated by stupendous achievements, although we have made notable progress. I regret to say that we have had no vast fortunes willed to us to double our endowment. We are still looking with hope for the good fairy to build us a quadrangle with all the accessories for which our hearts have yearned, such as more spacious reception rooms, adequately planned for entertainment with all the necessary supplementary gadgets. We want also a large enough assembly room in which the whole school may gather together at one time, and we have also tucked away in our minds a vision of a commodious dining room. We still have a longing for that model teaching building, and a completely furnished and equipped unit all our own for the teaching of the nursing arts, and in our optimistic moments we dream of a swimming pool and gymnasium for the use of the women students in this section of the University. These are just a few of our longings and aspirations yet unfulfilled.

You may be somewhat surprised to know that this dream we have unfolded has some chance of becoming true. How soon, of course, we can not prophesy, but we have assurance, from those whose influence counts the most, that our needs are known and greatly appreciated, and that steps will be taken to overcome our deficiencies when the propitious time arrives (which means, I am sure, when money is available).

There is a sympathetic understanding on the part of the University administration that the Yale School of Nursing must be properly equipped to prepare young women to occupy positions of distinction in its own professional field in numbers as large as are consistent with its resources.

Some of you, who recall the hospital building in its earlier days, who received your experience in the Giffords and in the old North wards and, when the building program began, were shifted from the Gifford Chapel to South (including the basement used to replace the Farnam Operating Room), and who were then moved into the new and modern hospital wards, will hardly believe that we have again outgrown our facilities. Again we must think of new buildings to meet the demands for the hospital care of an increasing number of patients. You will be thrilled to know that already the new library building adjacent to the Sterling Hall of Medicine is gaining in stature, and before the end of the year it will be in readiness to house the marvelous libraries which have been bequeathed to the School of Medicine. The library of the School of Nursing will also be housed in this new building, and we are slowly taking steps to acquire additional volumes to our general as well as to our historical library.

Before closing my letter to you, I want to say that perhaps the greatest need we have today is more scholarships to enable well prepared and promising young women to enter this school. We have great opportunities here, and these should be made available to a larger number of young college graduates who, in increasing numbers, are interested in nursing. Would the regional groups be interested in each attempting to raise at least a scholarship of $150 to assist one student to enter, who otherwise would be debarred from the privileges which you have enjoyed? Have we grown sufficiently to begin now to think in such terms?

With affectionate greetings and great pride in your success,

Very faithfully yours,
THE ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION

At the biennial convention of the American Nurses' Association to be held in Philadelphia in May of this year two important questions will be discussed:

(1) An increase of 25 cents per capita in dues to the A.N.A.

(2) The basis for membership in the State and American Nurses' Associations, that is, whether membership in an alumnae association shall constitute the basis for acceptance in the State and National organizations, as at present, or, whether membership should be based solely upon the nurse's professional qualifications.

Concerning the first, it will be well to keep in mind that the present dues of fifty cents included in resident alumnae dues, is the lowest known dues for any corresponding professional association. At the same time the National Association is continuously being called upon to do bigger and bigger things for the advantages of the nursing profession at large.

Concerning the second, the Yale School of Nursing Alumnae Association is particularly and keenly interested. This is the question about which all our constitution-making for the last three years has pivoted. Graduates of the Yale School attending the Biennial and invested with power of voting, will be ready to cast their vote with intelligent purpose. We are sincerely hoping that the matter will get beyond discussion to a vote and that the issue will be settled in such a way as to clear the path for rapid formulation of a satisfactory constitution for our alumnae association.

ABOUT THE RECENT QUESTIONNAIRE

Our secretary, Helen Wersebe, has the following to report as a summary of the questionnaires that went out to the Alumnae in February:

I haven't had answers to all the questionnaires yet, but I still find mail in my box, now an average of about two letters a day as compared with a previous ten, and I'm still an optimist.

Thank you so much for your assistance and information; the results have been most gratifying. It has been enlightening to find how many writers and talkers there are in our organization. Incidentally, the latter seem to have quite an edge on the others. Also, it has been as good as a general reunion to open the letters, because I have found so many personal greetings and comments included with the answers.

The results so far show that one member has assisted with the writing of a book and has had an article published; two have had articles published; twenty-three have given talks; and thirteen have done both of the latter things. One hundred and thirty-nine had nothing special to report. A grand total of one hundred and seventy-seven answers to questionnaires have been received to date. Three hundred and ninety-two were originally sent out, involving an equivalent of sixteen hours work for one person plus the mimeographing which the University Alumni office does for us (at a price). I have a feeling I’ll need some assistance in cataloguing all this information—that part of the work has not been started yet.

"TO MISS McCORKLE—AN ORCHID"

In the awarding of an orchid, it is always fun to give a little bit of encouragement of good work done, but this morning it is a little more fun than usual, for it goes to someone who has what not very many people have today and what we might almost call a "Cause." It goes to someone who follows this Cause simply untiringly, whose whole life centers around it—it goes to Mae D. McCorkle, Maternity Supervisor of the Visiting Nurse Association, which position she has held since 1933.

Miss McCorkle has raised the standard of maternity service to a very high level. She has developed the V. N. A.’s program of mothers’ classes for prospective mothers so that now over 500 women a year attend these mothers’ classes. Her reputation as a specialist in maternity nursing and as an expert teacher is widespread and has attracted women from all parts of the city and we might also say from almost all walks of life. She was the instigator of Fathers’ Councils, held under the auspices of the Health Department and one of the main props behind this program. She is determined that childbearing shall be as safe and comfortable an experience as is possible and that deaths of mothers and babies shall be cut to the lowest possible figure. She works determinedly and untiringly to this end and so I think that there is no better person to receive an orchid this morning, and we are glad to give it in gratitude for the marvelous job she is doing, and with the gratitude of all the women in New Haven whom she has helped since she has been doing this fine work.

FROM OUR DEAN EMERITUS

Hartford, Connecticut
April, 1940

DEAR COLLEAGUES AND FORMER STUDENTS:

I did not think I should again address you from the Neuro-Psychiatric Institute, yet here I still am and with the Yale representation of four, for I venture to include myself, strengthened by Miss Esther A. Anderson, Class of 1939, who is taking the Post-Graduate Course.

We are, I assure you, earnestly hoping that next year’s class will include some 1940 graduates.

In this period of world history it is difficult to raise our thoughts above the tragic happenings in countries to which we, as nurses, have been evermore closely drawn. There are moments, indeed, when conditions in this country, not less than happenings overseas, suggest that the true conception of the very state for the perpetuation of which so much blood is being shed in Europe, is lost. Yet is such the case?

The fact that never before were the women of the world through any social expression so intimately, so constructively and sympathetically linked, is a denial.

In the eons of time a hundred years is but a moment but in that moment nursing as a profession came into organized existence and nurses have clasped hands around the globe, a marvel of achievement. Look at the graduate roster of our so young school. Think of the students who have come from every continent to learn from Yale, the differences of language and tradition wiped out through a common cause.

Acknowledging the darkness of today’s outlook this we believe, that those fine emotions inherent in man, pity, sympathy, love or what you will, are being woven by the art and science of human engineering into a plan and program as creative and constructive as the power of the sun that indiscriminately serves mankind.

The most superficial grasp of the significance of the world-wide health movement, this integrated movement for the advancement of civilization through its most essential factor the health, physical, mental and spiritual of the coming generation, can leave no question that the desire for the universal good life is an imperishable ideal and ideals, often ridiculed, often scorned, have a way of becoming functioning facts.

There is perhaps no need to repeat what you have already heard many times; that to us as a profession has been given the opportunity to penetrate to the heart of the matter, the family.

If the eyes of understanding of any have been opened ours should be to those social conditions that are most conducive to the good life. I speak advisedly when I say that there are no members of the nursing profession who should go out better prepared for the social tasks that await them than the graduates of the Yale School, for the sound foundation you so wisely laid enabled a curriculum which, while not lessening, even emphasizing the importance of the technical aspects of nursing practice, has put the student in step with the continuous advancements of the medical and social sciences. Through such knowledge the simplest tasks often assure profound significance. Be the practice of the Yale nurse where and what it may the interpretation of her contribution, her attack upon the problems involved will reflect the rich preparation she has demanded of herself. May you have the fortitude and vision, my dear colleagues, to meet the struggle of the coming years and as the vanguard of democracy’s strongest ally, the international health movement, play your part effectively in the greatest challenge of the centuries, the vindication of the democratic state.

Faithfully yours,

A RURAL MATERNAL AND INFANT HYGIENE SERVICE

The frontier—do we see in our mind’s eye a procession of covered wagons, a settlement of log cabins or sod huts, or do we visualize the rough and ready ways of living—living without any of the conveniences of our modern urban life? The “frontiers” of history are not, as we might think, relics of an era that has passed.

Frontiers exist today in countless remote rural sections of the south and southwest. Frontiers where knowledge of a better way of living, a knowledge of the prevention of illness and the preservation of health is non-existent. There are entire counties where medical care is unknown. There are numerous districts where the services of public health nurses are urgently needed, and particularly the services of trained public health nurses who can plan, organize, and direct health programs.

There is a certain satisfaction, along with the discouragements, to be derived from developing a service in a new field which more than compensates for isolation, and being obliged to lead a very simple life. The following account may give some idea of how a particular service based on a community need was developed:

In a poor, farming county in southern Maryland, which we consider fairly typical of many in the southern area, with a population of 16,000, about one-half white and one-half colored, scattered over a rather large area with no hospital in the county, a complete maternity and infant health program was planned. This was done primarily to reduce a very high infant death rate and also to give better care to the mothers and infants of the county.

There were six physicians in active practice. There were twenty-two untrained midwives who were delivering three-fourths of the infants, white as well as colored. Approximately 15% of the mothers in the county were receiving prenatal care.

Since it has been pointed out in many areas that adequate prenatal care will prevent at least 65% of maternal deaths, we gradually established prenatal clinics in each section of the county. The problem of transportation precluded the use of a single central clinic. As it is, some of the patients walk five or six miles to attend clinic. The physician practicing in that section became the clinician. He is assisted by a maternity nurse. These six clinics were set up in vacant store rooms, a midwife’s home and the Department of Health offices with simple, often makeshift equipment.

When the patient visits the clinic, in addition to a complete physical examination, usually the first she has ever had, she is instructed in preparation for her delivery at home and in preparing supplies for herself and baby. She is taught the proper hygienic measures which she should follow. The work in the clinic is divided among the doctor, nurse, and midwife. The doctor and nurse examine patients, and the midwife shows the mothers how to prepare their supplies for delivery.

At the present time 88% of the mothers in the county receive prenatal care; 65% of these are seen in the Health Department Clinics and the rest by the private physicians. One-third of the mothers seen in the clinics were found to have some abnormal condition. Where ever possible those conditions were corrected or carefully followed before the baby was born. Ten percent of the mothers are sent to hospitals out of the county each year because a home delivery is not considered safe for them.

A twenty-four hour consultation service was offered for any midwife who sent for help while with a patient when she was in doubt as to her condition or progress. In the carrying out of this very popular service many a long drive over lonely, muddy woods roads has been made in the small hours of the morning. Not a few trips have been finished on foot after one's car has bogged down in the mud, or by row boat when there are no passable roads. In spite of such difficulties it has been a genuine satisfaction to see the marked change which has come about in the knowledge and technique of the midwives; to see scientific knowledge replace superstition and ignorance; to see adequate, clean equipment replace meager unsanitary outfits; to see the patient who thought any or no arrangement for her confinement adequate, fully prepared with the best she has of clean materials and surroundings.

A delivery assistance service was offered the doctors for patients who were not able to employ a nurse. This service has been a help to the busy doctor, shortening the time he would otherwise have to spend on a case. It has also been a comfort to the patient to have some one nearby who knew how to help her and on whom she could rely.

Nearly every infant is visited by the nurse as soon after birth as possible. All formula feeding cases among the poorer infants as well as sick infants are followed closely by the nurse. No effort is made to build up a large case load, but concentrated work is done on problem cases. Approximately 34% of the infants born in the county comprise the case load.

We have undertaken a program of education for the practicing midwife in the county. Contrary to the ideas held by some that the colored so-called midwife should be put out of practice, we have found that she is a very necessary worker, especially among her own people. She is usually a respected leader in her district and we know that she works long and hard for very little recompense. Those midwives in the county who were physically unable to continue practice and who were too old to attend classes were persuaded to retire. Intensive instruction was commenced with the remaining fourteen who wished to continue practice. In small class groups, instruction was given in the elements of obstetrics, in nursing procedures, and in the preventive aspects of obstetrics. The training period included observation in a near-by hospital and many supervised deliveries in the homes. We have found that it is not difficult to arouse the interest and to stimulate the efforts of midwives in helping to achieve some of our aims for the better care of mothers and babies. They are entirely responsible for clinic attendance of all patients. Two of them have started well baby conferences.

It has been a pleasure to teach them for they were eager to learn and were very soon putting into practice the "new ways." As a protection both to the patient and to themselves they will not take a patient for delivery who has not had prenatal care. They have learned to recognize abnormal conditions, how to act in emergencies, and when to send for help.

Since the opening of the clinic service in December of 1935 there has been an enrollment of 780 patients. There has been one maternal death which occurred in the hospital.

The infant death rate was reduced 65%. The stillbirth rate dropped 50%.

It would have been impossible for one or even two public health nurses to have done the work that has been done in this county—we have really had twelve assistants, the midwives, who have helped in many ways in the program.

As the program has grown and developed, requests for teaching of midwives and nurses have come from other counties in the state. That project now takes the time of the original maternity nurse, who, leaving a specially trained nurse in her place is free to travel throughout the state and give refresher courses to the nurses and midwives who could not leave their centers to go away for study. This was done in an effort to affect after a period of perhaps three years, the entire maternal and infant health nursing program of the state and to secure a higher quality of work and a higher standard of care.

In conclusion, as on any frontier, there is room for and need for the trained worker; and in meeting the needs of the communities in which she works she will in most instances, I believe, find a real satisfaction and experience a sense of accomplishment.

Elizabeth R. Ferguson, Y. S. N. '34,
Consultant in Maternal and Child Hygiene,
Maryland State Dept. of Health.
NEWS FROM THE SCHOOL

The Student Council continues to serve as a clearing house for student opinion, and as the organ of communication between the administration and the student body. The usual contributions were made toward the support of the daily teas in the Hall of Medicine, and for the Christmas gifts for the employees at Nathan Smith, Sterling, and in the Hospital. For the past two years, the Council has awarded a scholarship of fifty dollars to a member of the graduating class who would appreciate having the pinch of that last spring term eased a bit. The student uniform problem has been, as ever, on our monthly ticket. Ye Council members of old no doubt recall those heated harangues contra the long sleeves; I wonder if you all have seen the Class of 1942 with their short puffed innovations. We are all working at present toward the realization of a really attractive uniform coat.

The Council has started to compile a detailed file of all social activities throughout the year, to be kept current, and to be serviceable as a central source of reference and precedent for the planning of all social functions; for example, the first year class had available to them this year the detailed report of the Freshman dance for the past two years. Arrangements are under way at present to provide through Council funds the use of the Sterling gym one night a week for group sports, and perhaps provide for a closer relationship between classes via interclass basketball, etc.

This spring we were glad for the opportunity to aid in some measure the unfortunate plight of students in war zones by contributing to the Student War Relief Fund, our donation to be divided between Europe and the Far East; it is amazing how much even a small amount of money means to these students. It is estimated that in China at the present rate of exchange, one dollar will pay for the medical care of ten students for an entire year. We have also had contact outside of the school by means of letters from student organizations in other schools of nursing, one particularly interesting one coming from Winnipeg, Canada.

The Council would always be delighted to hear from its old members or any of the alumnae who, in terms of their enriched experience elsewhere, should have something new to offer us.

HERE, THERE AND EVERYWHERE

Elizabeth James ’33 is the first of the graduates of the Yale University School of Nursing to receive a Doctor’s degree in Medicine. She graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School in Philadelphia in June, 1939, subsequent to receiving her B.N.

Eleanor Fisher Johnston ’37 moved to Honolulu in January, where her husband is resident in medicine at Queen’s Hospital. Psyche has a full schedule of classes at the University, A.A.U.W. work, piano lessons, and the responsibilities of a housewife.

Mildred Bushnell Yale ’35 writes that young David Bushnell, born July 19, 1939 is proving to be a full time job, and a very pleasant one.

Jane Foster McConnell ’35 could probably tell us fascinating tales of her work in a British hospital this summer during the evacuation.

Sofia Pincheira Ehrenberg von Ungern ’32 wrote very discouragingly that there was no hope for nursing work in Bolivia at the present time, because the authorities believed that in that country trained nurses are not necessary. But on January 20th she wrote that at an exposition in Santiago, nursing had a small place for the first time. Her name and portrait appeared in that section.

Anne Goodrich Waters ’26 held an interesting showing of her achievements in photography at the Hotel Beekman Tower in January, 1940. She will be found exhibiting her work in booth A at the Biennial in Philadelphia in May.

Lily Berman Covit received her B.S. degree in public health nursing in April, 1939, at the School for Public Health Nursing, the University of the Philippines.
Anne Leffingwell ’35 is working for the Lane County Health Department in Oregon. They have an eight nurse unit which covers a county of some 4587 square miles, and a population of over 60,000.

Raidie Poole ’35 is Secretary to the advisory board of the Department of Health at the State Teachers’ College in Superior, Wis. She had an article published in the November issue of ‘‘Public Health Nursing.’’ Raidie will conduct a Round Table discussion on College Nursing at the Biennial on May 16th.

Mary Nash Brautigam ’28 says she is ‘‘getting lots of experience in pediatric nursing with three children. Prevention is still our watchword.’’

Mary Taylor Swoboda ’26 is to give a thirty-hour course in ‘‘Mental Hygiene in Nursing’’ next fall in the newly organized Department of Nursing in the School of Education of Boston University.

Ovidia Evensen ’37 has been conducting a course in Family Health under the Adult Education Division of Wayne University.

Evangeline Hall Morris ’27 is assistant Professor of Public Health Nursing at Simmons in addition to raising a pair of very active sons. She is planning to give an Institute in Social Hygiene at the Biennial in Philadelphia; and last week Mrs. Morris spoke at the New England Health Education Association meeting in Hartford.

Elizabeth Perry Walter ’34 was in Puerto Rico in December, 1939 and visited several hospitals there, the Ryder Memorial, the Presbyterian and the brand new Tropical Medicine School’s Hospital.

Eileen Ditchburn Troop ’31 has been acting clerical assistant in the School of Nursing of the University of Toronto. She attended a dinner given by the nursing school at which 53 schools of nursing were represented—each person wearing the student uniform of her school. No one there except a few from the Rockefeller Foundation had ever seen a Yale uniform.

After April 22, Kathleen Thornton ’36 will be director of the Children’s Study Home, connected with the Child Guidance Clinic, of Springfield, Mass.

Shirley Shingle Speir ’32 is back in Cheyenne, Wyo., after ten years in New Haven.

Shirley Harvey ’33 has just had her first vacation since she left New Haven. She went to Florida, and from there flew to Havana. On her way back from Miami she stopped to see Dorothy Ohline ’33 in Dunedin, Florida.

Elizabeth Hawkins ’31 has kept busy bringing up three children, helping her husband in his office, and doing all the sewing for their eight bed hospital in Brunswick, Maine.
Irm Bieheusen '32 is to receive the degree of Master of Public Health in June. She has been doing full time graduate work in addition to her job as Health Nurse in the Y. U. S. N. Incidentally, she is the second School of Nursing alumna to receive a higher degree from Yale.

Eleanor Roberts Kinney '39 is an instructor in the History of Nursing and Materia Medica at the New England Deaconess Hospital, and is studying for her Ph.D. in Bacteriology at Boston University.

306 North Mulberry Street
Marshall, Michigan
March 12, 1940

DEAR ANNE:

Brace yourself! The bombardment of pleas for information about the Michigan Group received during the past several years from you, Mae McCorkle, and Helen Wersebe has finally lifted me from lethargy and started thoughts flowing and the pen moving.

The so-called Michigan Group has been active by fits and starts. Spasmodically a valiant attempt is made to call together the entire group, but with meager success, probably due to factors of distance and transportation. But however few the persons present, the gatherings are always convivial and productive of copious chatter and chuckles about the good old days and the friends and experiences dating from New Haven and spreading now pretty well over the country.

Because we are fairly close together (out here a distance of fifty miles is merely an appetizer for dinner), those of us who work for the W. K. Kellogg Foundation are more often able to enjoy an evening of mixed reminiscence and current progress reports on mutual acquaintances and mutual problems or pleasures lining the path of public health nurses.

For, in response to your queries as to what we are out here with the W. K. K. F., we are public health nurses. We have been listed under various titles in the directory—family health counselor, health educator, etc.—all of which are correct, but perhaps a bit fancy-sounding. Essentially we are nothing more nor less than public health nurses. However, as anyone in the sisterhood knows, the functions of a public health nurse can, like Sherwin Williams paints, cover the earth, and here they very nearly do in the seven rural counties cooperating with the W. K. K. F. in a program of public health education.

To detail our general and special functions would take a great deal of space. Probably it is sufficient to say that our services are generalized, that we work with family-units and with community groups, that our emphasis is on prevention rather than cure, and that our basic role is that of educator and counselor. What problems we cannot solve under our own programs we refer to specialized social agencies. We ourselves are receiving a liberal education not only in the nature of county and township government and of state and county agencies concerned with health and social problems, but also in an understanding of rural people and the opportunities and restrictions of small-town and farm-life.

Yale has been quite well represented in the Foundation. At present four of us are doing our daily stint of driving, teaching, and demonstrating—Dorothy Fear, Polly Parker, Esther Mary Hirst, and myself. We have been preceded at various times and for various lengths of time by Mildred Negus, Mary Payne, Iva Torrens, Rose Defoe, and Mary Huntington. The last two here met Mr. Cook and Mr. Shaw and are now counseling their own families, a matrimonial score for Yale-in-W. K. K. F. of 22.2%.

Good luck to you on this year's bulletin and greetings to any old cronies you may meet for me—

ELEANOR KING.

FROM THE NORTH

Being very much enamored with life in Alaska, it isn't hard at all to write enthusiastically of my work here. However, let me remind you that Alaska is a very large place (you've probably seen the map of Alaska superimposed on that of the United States, showing that with its northernmost point touching the Canadian line, it stretches from Los Angeles to the coast of Georgia) and that I am nursing in just one small village in what is called southeastern Alaska or the panhandle—a narrow strip of mainland and a chain of hundreds of islands which stretch down the western coast of Canada. I hate to disillusion you about Alaska, but Wrangell is a very civilized town with electricity, a municipally owned water system, steam heated apartments, a moving picture show, a fifteen-bed hospital, an excellent doctor, an equally capable dentist, and all the other appurtenances of a small town, including six beer parlors and a cocktail bar!

Squeezed in between the Pacific and the steep, heavily forested mountains, Wrangell is a typical Alaskan fishing village. The ugly unpainted frame houses serve to accentuate the beauty of the surrounding snowtopped island mountains which close in the inside passage and make it seem more a lake than an ocean. The isolation of an island, with the next settlement four boat hours away, is complete and restful. The weekly mailboat is such an event that we feel sorry for the poor mortals who suffer the commonplace experience of having their mail delivered at their doors twice a day.

To further disappoint you there are no dogteams, no igloos, no Eskimos. In fact, the winters are milder than New Haven winters ever thought of being. In the same latitude as Copenhagen, and in the path of the Japanese current, the summers are cool and the winters warm, and it rains all of the time. (My Alaskan censor insists that I add almost.)

Indians there are plenty of, but I’m afraid you would be disappointed in them too, for they have been in contact with white men for more than a hundred years which is long enough for them to discard their own best traditions while they absorb the shabbier parts of the so-called culture which surrounds them. They are very much the underdogs and have a racial inferiority complex which is perhaps partially responsible for their susceptibility to alcoholic beverages.

I feel particularly fortunate to have a position where I can stay put and work with the entire population. Until a year ago, the Office of Indian Affairs’ nurses cared for the natives of the Territory (Alaskan Indians, Aleuts, and Eskimos) while the Territorial Department of Health nurses were responsible for all others, including Mexicans, Filipinos, and Japanese. This meant that a village of 1200, such as Wrangell, could not keep two full time nurses busy, so that both government nurse and Territorial nurse were on an itinerant basis. A year ago the two agencies decided to try the plan of putting one nurse in the community who would serve the community as a whole without regard to race, being under contract to both agencies. This is being tried out experimentally in Wrangell and Petersburg. We are also attempting, of course, to demonstrate to the communities the need for the services of a public health nurse to the extent that they will share part of the financial responsibility for the program.

Tuberculosis is our biggest health problem in Alaska and in Wrangell. It still heads the list of causes of death in Alaska, the death rate for tuberculosis being seven times that of the United States. With no sanatoria and so few hospital beds designated for tubercular patients as to be negligible, it seems a very uphill job to do anything about it. During the last three years the Territorial Department of Health has been carrying on an intensive tuberculin testing and x-raying program with the result that we now know what our problem is and where our chief foci of infection lie. With the homes crowded and unsanitary (it’s the Indians I am speaking of now, chiefly), our most direct solution at present is to remove the children from the home while trying to educate the patient, if a minimal case, or while waiting for him to die, in the advanced cases.

Indeed I sometimes feel that I am a child placement agent rather than a public health nurse. The Indian affinity for drink makes for a large number of neglected children. Then in the summer time, when the men are all away fishing, and the women working in the canneries, a sick mother means that we have anywhere up to five children to spare, with the seemingly hopeless task of finding a place for them to sleep before night. Our new boarding home for temporary placements is our chief pride and joy. Now, if Aggie Kananisty decides to have delirium tremens, we can put Christine in the boarding home until the men with guns withdraw from under Aggie's bed.

On the whole, I am impressed with the general healthiness of the place. There has not been a maternal death for ten years. The deaths from communicable diseases other than tuberculosis are so few as to be negligible. When we examined 200 school children last summer, we found not one case of impetigo, ringworm, or pediculosis. A pleasant medical personnel in the past, and a congenial hospital, have accustomed them to seek medical care for the slightest ailment. The problem in Child Health Conference is to keep the attendance within manageable limits. A racial love for oily foods, brings the Indians to the Health Center with their cod liver oil bottles for refills from the five gallon can. A rainy climate (23 inches in October!), a shortage of fresh fruits and vegetables, make us feel that it is worthwhile to make cod liver oil available to all who will take the trouble to bring their own bottles. All babies are raised on canned milk, fresh milk being scarce, expensive, and as yet unpasteurized.

These are, of course, the impressions of a chechakho, as the Alasksans call a newcomer, for I have been here less than a year. But this I know, that I want to stay another year, for the Alasksans have a zest for living that makes it much fun to work with them and for them.

HELEN JOHNSON,
Wrangell, Alaska.

P.S. It's an unpardonable offense for anyone from Yale to go through Wrangell without looking me up—no matter what the hour! We may be very smug about our well-rounded existence, but none the less we get a big thrill out of visitors from Outside.
