On Saturday morning February 18th from Brady Corridor came the sound of many voices and the aroma of coffee. A model for creating a design of the future Yale-New Haven Medical Center in the rotunda was the center of much attention, Jane Stana '53 was in charge of registration and Sarah Turner '56 was chairman of the coffee committee.

At the special business meeting there was a brief discussion of the recommendation of the Board of Directors that the Annie W. Goodrich Committee suspend its fund raising activities for the present, and that the Alumnae Association concentrate its fund raising efforts in support of the Yale University School of Nursing Endowment Fund. This recommendation was then passed unanimously. Mary Rendall '57 announced that the Annie W. Goodrich Fund now totals $121,400.47.

Mr. William H. Baumer, Assistant to the Chairman of Johnson and Johnson, spoke on "The Cost and Financing of Graduate Education in Nursing." He is actively involved in the National Fund for Graduate Nursing Education which has an initial goal of one million dollars in 1961. This money will be allocated to the thirty accredited colleges and universities in the country offering graduate programs in nursing. The aim of this fund is to raise the level of nursing practice through the preparation of leaders. Mr. Baumer pointed out that each masters degree costs the enrolling institution an average of $2,500, little more than a third of which is met by tuition. The thirty graduate programs now grant masters degrees to about 1,100 nurses a year, but it is estimated that four times this number is needed each year to meet the demand for teachers, administrators, researchers, consultants and clinical specialists in nursing. New funds are needed to enable these graduate programs to enroll more students in their advanced nursing programs. Many questions and comments followed Mr. Baumer's stimulating talk as alumnas discussed public understanding of graduate education in nursing, as well as the financial costs of such programs. Particular interest was focused on the activities and roles of the nurse leaders.

Alumnae then joined the Yale alumni for luncheon at the Commons. There was an overflow crowd and the luncheon as usual was delicious. Afterwards four Yale medals were presented "for outstanding service to Yale." One of the recipients was Dr. Herbert Thoms, Professor Emeritus of Obstetrics and Gynecology. Dean Acheson was the luncheon speaker.

Returning to Brady for the afternoon program, alumnas heard Dean Florence Wald report on "Studies Concerning the Effect of Nursing on Patient Welfare at Yale." Mrs. Wald pointed out that there were three basic questions: 1) How do we measure patient welfare? 2) What is the specific description of nursing activity? 3) What are the effects of the nursing activity on the condition or welfare of the patient? She summarized several reports of nursing studies which have been done in this country and commented that in the past few years increasing emphasis has been placed on research in nursing care. In contrast to some of the research being done elsewhere the studies of the effect of nursing on patient welfare here at Yale have a fairly narrow focus. Emphasis has been placed on the actions which the nurse takes that enables the patient to use the health measures available as the patient or individual reaches toward an optimum state of health. Student studies have dealt with varied situations. One study compared the effect of specific nursing actions in response to patient complaints of pain in contrast to the nurses' control of pain by giving medication. A second study has been concerned with the effect of exploring the meaning of communication with confused or disoriented patients. Another study dealt with the effect of nursing on the process of labor, and still another examined the problems encountered by surgical clinic patients who are to carry out treatments at home. Evidence from these studies indicates that specific types of nursing activity can be devised which bring about results which are measurably different and more effective than those obtained by the usual conventional type of nursing care. Mrs. Wald pointed out that much further study is needed and that the description of nursing care, the measurement of patient welfare and tools for the collection of data, all need further development and remain as future problems for faculty and students to study.

YSN ACTIVITIES AT THE NLN CONVENTION

The noon hour of April 12th was busy for nearly sixty alumnae who were attending the NLN Convention in Cleveland. From pre-luncheon sherry to lingering farewells after the final cup of coffee, there was a constant exchange of news, ideas and activities...as well as appreciation for the planning of Cleveland alumnae. Dean Florence Wald discussed the School's future plans and, specifically, its responsibility in public health nursing. Anne Ryle '33, Director, Department of Nursing, G-NHCH, outlined changes projected for the Medical Center in a "redeveloped" New Haven.

Speakers at the League meetings included Helene Fitzgerald '26, who with Dr. John S. Hathaway, Director, Department of University Health, and Dr. James S. Davie, Sociologist and Coordinator of Research, Department of University Health, reported on the nursing project at the University Health Service. At one of the sessions on Maternal and Child Health Nursing, Reva Rubin '46 spoke on "A Focus on the Mother" and Florence Erickson M.S. '54, and Ernestine Wiedenbach, Associate Professor of Obstetric Nursing, were two of the panelists. Presiding at this session was Ione Ripley M.S. '52.

YSN AUTHORS

M. Elizabeth Tennant, YSN faculty member, has an article "Adventures in Nursing Abroad" in the Nursing Outlook, April 1961.

FUND TO HONOR MISS ALLING

Miss Dorothy W. Alling, Associate Director of the Nursing Service at the Grace-New Haven Community Hospital, died on October 27, 1960, after an extended illness. To honor her memory, the Department of Nursing is establishing a Memorial Fund, the income of which will be used to sponsor an annual lecture or institute on an aspect of nursing service. Alumnae who may wish to contribute to this fund should send their contributions to:

Miss Evelyn Sturmer, Chairman, Dorothy W. Alling Memorial Fund, Grace-New Haven Community Hospital, 789 Howard Avenue, New Haven, Conn.

ALUMNAE SPONSOR SYMPOSIUM ON COLLEGIATE EDUCATION IN NURSING

The Westchester - Fairfield Regional group of which Adah Davis '45 is president, sponsored a most successful symposium on "Collegiate Education in Nursing" on February 11th in Westport, Conn. Planned primarily for high school students in the area, mothers, guidance directors and leaders of Future Nurses Clubs also attended. According to the National League for Nursing, it was believed to be the first time in the country that such a conference specifically to discuss collegiate programs in nursing has been held for high school students. Students from Skidmore College, Bridgeport University, Columbia University and the University of California at Los Angeles described their nursing programs and answered questions. Dean Wald discussed the role of college graduates in nursing. The high school students were eager to know about entrance requirements, student life, collegiate courses, nursing experience and financial costs. The enthusiasm of the senior nursing students for their collegiate programs and the interest of the high school girls in nursing, created a lively discussion about education for nursing.

Following the symposium, local alumnae served tea to the group. On the planning committee were Mrs. Roland C. Clement '46, Mrs. Daniel Hardenberg ex. '38, Mrs. Robert A. Harman '40, Mrs. Caroline Giegges '33 and Mrs. Wald.

OLD ISSUES OF A.J.N. NEEDED

January 1955 - June 1956
September, November and December 1956
July 1957 and June 1958

If any alumnae have the above copies of the American Journal of Nursing and would be willing to give them to the School, the Faculty Library Committee would be most grateful. The School wants to have the American Journal of Nursing from 1955 to the present bound and kept in the School so that they will be easily accessible to the staff and students.
A CORRECTED REPORT

The NEWSLETTER for the fall of 1960 carried a report of the Alumnae College meeting on June 10th, 1960. It contained the following statement: "Miss Henderson discussed her current research involving a classification of research studies. She showed the group present material that discusses and indexes some research studies and thereby neatly indicated the great inadequacies in present nursing research classification." The reporter adds, with the implication that it was said, "A periodical is sorely needed to keep the nursing profession informed of research pertinent to nursing." Since NURSING RESEARCH, established in 1952, and now published quarterly is devoted to this purpose some readers of the NEWSLETTER have said that this statement, erroneously attributed to Miss Henderson, may be interpreted as a repudiation of this journal, on whose editorial board she, by the way, served for four years.

To set the record straight the paper read by Miss Henderson is summarized as follows:

Entitled "Library Tools for Nursing Research" the paper first presented some working definitions of research from the most exclusive to an inclusive statement such as "a structured effort to solve a problem." It next called attention to the importance in any study of reviewing the literature; the necessity of the researcher familiarizing himself, or herself, with previous work directly or indirectly related to the study in prospect.

Miss Henderson then pointed out the following types of library tools that might be used in a search for reports of studies or other publications: indexes, inventories, and lists, abstracts, reviews and surveys of the literature, yearbooks, source books, encyclopedias, dictionaries, bibliographies, and catalogues. A sample of each class of library tool as prepared for other health groups and all the tools of each type prepared for the specific use of nurses were shown to the Alumnae College audience to illustrate the relative paucity of library tools available in the field of nursing. Parenthetically we might note that copies of NURSING RESEARCH were among the items in the display because in them has been published collections of abstracts of nursing studies and also because its cumulative index represents "a tool."

A three-column table was distributed to the audience showing in column one "Types of library tools"; in column two "Examples in other fields"; and in column three (for each type) "What is available in the field of nursing".

Lastly Miss Henderson pointed out that an Interagency Council on Library Tools for Nursing was created in 1960 to which all major national library and national nursing organizations belong. Other member agencies include the Institute for Research and Service in Nursing Education at Teachers College, because it is conducting the abstracting service resulting in the publication of abstracts in NURSING RESEARCH, and the Yale University School of Nursing because under its auspices Miss Henderson is currently directing the preparation of a retrospective index to the periodical and non-periodical literature as related to nursing research.
